AT ODDS ON CHOICE OF TAFT'S MANAGER

WORRIED BY THIRD PARTY

Situation Desperate, Says Gen. Clayton, but Taft Is Confident That He Will Win.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—None of the few persons who passed the White House in the blistering heat to-day would have suspected that such an important event as the selection of a Chairman of the National Committee of a great political party was in progress within. The silver-buttoned negro doormen were at their places and the hotly uniformed policemen walked up and down, not in their usual beats, but a hundred feet away, where there was shade.

After the eight members of the sub-committee of the Republican National Committee entered the mansion at 10:30 o'clock this morning, not a soul came or went until after 5 o'clock, when, one by one, the eight emerged and slowly wended their way to their hotels, stopping a moment to tell the waiting newspaper correspondents the result of their day's work—which was naught. The committee will meet again at 9:30 in the mornnig, and, as Committeeman Estabrook of New Hampshire said: "We shall continue to meet all the week until we finish our work."

The members of the sub-committee who were present were Gen. Powell Clayton of Arkansas, F. W. Estabrook of New Hampshire, Alvah H. Martin of Virginia, C. B .Warren of Michigan, J. T. Adams of Iowa, Newell Sanders of Tennessee, T. K. Niedringhaus of Missouri, and R. O. West of Illinois. S. A. Perkins of the State of Washington was not able to be present. The sub-committee has full power to act in the choice of a National Chairman without the ratification of the full National Committee.

The day was spent exchanging views. The committeemen lunched with the President, and, with a strong battery of electric fans in commission, they undoubtedly had a far more comfortable time in the Executive Mansion than they would have had anywhere else in the city.

Neither Hilles Nor Barnes.

Two facts resulted from the general clearing-house treatment of the situation. It was made clear that Mr. Hilles, the President's secretary, would not be Chairman of the National Committee, and that the President's choice would not be William Barnes of New York. Not a single member of the sub-committee expressed himself in favor of Harry Daugherty of Ohio, who is regarded as the President's latest selection for the onerous position of National Chairman. All who talked at all after they came out from the conference said that they were casting about for a man of Mr. Barnes's abilities and skillfulness without taking Barnes himself.

"One thing we agreed on," said Gen. Clayton, as he strolled down to the avenue gate, "we all realize that we face a situation that is difficult—you might say desperate."

Mr. Estabrook, who came out of the conference with the understanding that he was to meet the correspondents, spoke as if the National Chairman might not be chosen to-morrow, owing to the difference of opinion of the members of the committee and the President. Mr. Estabrook spoke in high terms of Mr. Hilles, but expressed the opinion that he said many others had also expressed, that Mr. Hilles could be of great service close at the President's side, where he had been for many months past during the most strenuous campaign struggle any President ever had been called upon to undergo. Not only was there no specific choice of a candidate for Chairman, but members of the committee did not urge any man on the President's consideration. There was a general disposition all day to let events shape themselves for the present and have the President name his own man.

Strong Man Wanted.

The doubt among members of the sub-committee of the ability of Harry Daugherty to come up to the requirements of the job that will fall upon the National Chairman this year did not receive plain and unequivocal expression from members of the committee. It appeared rather in the want of spontaneous acceptance of the name and the man behind it. The committeemen seemed to think that the National Chairman should be a big, well-known man, whose very name would command confidence and support from one end of the country to the other.

The agitation of the name of Mr. Barnes for Chairman caused the sub-committee more concern than anything that occurred during the day. They said that Mr. Barnes would hurt the ticket in the West, where the President's claims to being a Progressive must be relied on to make any headway. But on one thing they were all agreed, and that was that it would be a good thing to have the services of a man of Mr. Barnes's ability and nerve. Mr. Barnes's desire to have the Chairmanship in order to get the chance to castigate Roosevelt was applauded on all sides, but while that would be the way to play the game in New York, it was generally believed that in the West, where the big end of the battle must be fought, the big boss would be a handicap.

Find Taft Too Optimistic.

Some of the President's guests seemed to observe in his comment on the outlook a disposition to underweigh the prospect of the success of the third party and to incline to the belief that within a few weeks the fight would resolve itself into the old-time struggle between the Republican and the Democratic Parties, with the old alignment and the opportunity to point to a record of things accomplished by the Republican Party for the good of the country on the one side and the inability of the Democratic Party on the other to conduct the Government without imperiling the prosperity of the country.

There was no hesitation on the part of members of the committee to let Mr. Taft understand distinctly that this campaign was not to be of the old sort, and that there was stern work ahead with a third party among the certainties.

Much confidence was expressed during the conference, it was said, in the prosperity argument when the campaign was actually under headway. The President himself referred to it at some length. He believes that the contrast between the panic-stricken condition of business during the years of the last Democratic Administration will cause many Republicans who are inclined to stray, to hesitate and turn back into the fold.

Talk among Republicans in Congress who do not admit that Mr. Taft is the nominee of the party has so far failed to reach any plan for presenting their views to the country. Senator Kenyon of Iowa, who as Mr. Cummins's campaign manager kept his name before the Chicago Convention up to the very last, has denounced that convention as fraudulent, and suggests that the evidence in the contested cases be submitted to an impartial jury to pass upon Mr. Taft's claims. But nothing has been done in that direction, and nothing can be done.

TURTLE DRAGS A FISHERMAN.

Jerks Him from His Boat and Speeds Across Jamaica Bay.

The aim of every fisherman who goes to Jamaica Bay for weakfish has long been to catch a big sea turtle which frequents the bay waters and makes a living stealing bait from the weakfish lines, and sometimes even snatching a fair catch from the line just as an excited fisherman is hauling it in. Eighteen-year-old John Leonard of 769 Madison Street, Brooklyn, was greatly excited yesterday afternoon, therefore, when he felt a tug on his line out at the edge of Big Pull Channel, near Ruffle Bay, close to Rockaway Inlet. The strain was greater than any weakfish could give, and Leonard cried excitedly to his brother:

"I believe I've got that old turtle. Watch me reel him in."

Everything was going nicely for the fisherman, when suddenly the turtle, sprang half out of water, turned, and started for the rowboat at railroad speed. Like the man who caught the wildcat unaided, but needed help to let it go, John had no alternative other than to cling to his line and try to reel it in. He shouted to his brother to keep the boat out of the turtle's way, and the other boy exercised all his watermanship, but the turtle reached the boat, dived under it, circled around, and started off, still at full speed, on another tack, with the line wrapped several times around the legs of his would-be captor.

"Hang on to him. You'll get him yet," shouted John's brother encouragingly as John flopped over the side and was dragged feet foremost under water. He sped through the water like a racing motorboat. Mostly his feet rose a few inches above the surface as he kicked and thrashed about. It was seldom that he managed to get his head out of the water and then he devoted his entire energy to catching his breath. His brother rowed excitedly along some distance behind. Then the fisherman suddenly shot to the surface of the water and turned over on his back. With a piece of the snapped line still fast about his ankles, John swam to the rowboat, almost exhausted and thoroughly scared. Along with the turtle had gone his new rod and line which he had bought expressly for yesterday's trip at a cost of $6.50.

SAVES THREE FROM WATER.

Amateur Athlete of Amityville Rescues Man and Two Girls.

Special to The New York Times.

AMITYVILLE, L. I., July 8.—A throng of men and women on a pier at Hemlock Beach, across Great South Bay from here, were thrown into great excitement this afternoon when Miss Violet Henry of New York, who arrived here recently on a visit to the family of A. S. Miller, slipped into the channel from shoal water several yards from shore and was rapidly carried away by the fast tide. Her cousin, Gladys Henry, and Mr. Miller, who were on the pier, rushed through the shoal water and jumped into the channel fully clothed.

They caught Miss Violet Henry, who was helpless in the water, but neither Miss Gladys Henry nor Mr. Miller was strong enough to get the girl ashore. All three were being swept along by the tide when young Charles de Quillfeldt ran into the water and soon reached the three.

They were a quarter of a mile from shore by this time, and de Quillfeldt had his hands full keeping the girls from strangling him. At last he got Miller to take the girls by the hands while he swam for shore clutching Miller's collar with one hand. It was nearly twenty minutes before he got them ashore, soaked and frightened, but unhurt.

TAGGART QUITS COMMITTEE.

Times His Action While His Record at Baltimore Is Still Fresh.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Thomas Taggart, the Democratic boss of Indiana, has resigned from the National Committee. His resignation is to take effect on July 14, the day before the Committee is to meet. In the meantime the Indiana State Committee will meet and choose his successor.

Mr. Taggart intended some time ago to leave the National Committee, but he wanted to stay in until he could leave with prestige. He is now in a position to do so. At the Baltimore Convention he was one of the most influential figure. He combination which defeated Bryan on the first test vote; but was the first one of that trip to see the handwriting on the wall and he swung to Wilson while Sullivan and Murphy were still trying vainly to stand out. Thus from both standpoints he stands in a better position for sagacity and success than either of the other two.

Finally, he had the satisfaction of swinging Gov. Marshall into the Vice Presidential nomination. He is the only one of the Triumvirate of bosses who comes out of the fray without a scratch.

SKIPPER TO MAKE COMPLAINT

Schooner Captain Declares Warships at Anchor Blocked Channel.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 8.—A complaint to the naval authorities in Washington concerning the manner in which the battleships were anchored across the Channel at Newport yesterday will be made to-morrow by Capt. Fred L. Babbitt of the four-masted schooner Marguerite, which arrived in port to-day.

Capt. Babbitt says that when he came in from sea with his schooner heavily laden with 2,500 tons of coal and somewhat hard to manage in the light breeze, he saw two battleships anchored squarely in the channel off the Dumplings, in the narrow entrance to the east passage, which is always used by deep draught ships.

He says that there was plenty of room for the war vessels to anchor elsewhere than in the middle of the channel; that three others were anchored above Jamestown, well out of the way, and that there was plenty of room for many more to anchor out of the channel.

$250,000 FIRE IN TONOPAH.

Business District and Many Dwellings in Nevada City Destroyed.

TONOPAH, Nev., July 8.—Two blocks in the business district of Tonopah were destroyed by fire early to-day. Scores of volunteers joined in the fight against the flames. Several office buildings were destroyed.

Many dwellings were also destroyed. The loss is estimated at about $250,000. The Tonopah Daily Bonanza is probably the heaviest loser. The paper's building was destroyed. The cause of the fire is unknown.

WORLD'S RECORDS GO AS AMERICANS WIN

In Great 800-Meter Race at Stockholm Three Yankee Victors Beat All Previous Time.

MEREDITH FIRST BY INCHES

15 Points, Scored in Day's Events, Put America First with 59 Points, with Sweden Second.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

STOCKHOLM, July 8.—Fifteen points won out of a possible 24 in to-day's events of the Olympic games tell in brief the story of continued American successes, but the mere figures cannot convey an adequate idea of the superb quality of the racing witnessed by the frantic throng in the stadium.

Probably no such finish was ever seen before as that in the finaly heat of the 800 meters, in which three Americans, headed by the remarkable schoolboy runner Meredith of Mercersburg Academy reached the tape with less than a yard between first and third, all three beating the previous world's record for the distance.

Doyens of The Athletic World and old time and present day athletes, many of whose names are household words in the realm of sports all agreed that it was the greatest race they had ever witnessed.

Meredith ran like a veteran of many races. One of the first to congratulate him on his victory was Melvin Sheppard, the dethroned champion from New York, who with Ira Davenport of the University of Chicago made a dead heat for secand and third places. When it is remembered that both these men surpassed all previous records for the 800, the quality of the contest can be imagined.

It is only fair to say that to Sheppard is due a large amount of credit for the result. He ran the race exactly as he told THE TIMES correspondent last night that he would, namely, to start off at a cracking pace, with the object of making Braun, the German champion, put on speed from the beginning, for all knew that the German had phenomenal speed in finishing, if he was allowed to go the early part of the race at moderate speed. The only thing that Sheppard did not count on was being beaten, but he was the first to admit that Meredith was a better man than he.

Crowd Frantic as They Raced.

At the crack of the pistol Sheppard was the first away, followed by Braun, Brock, the Canadian; Caldwell of Massachusetts, Edmundson of Los Angeles, and the others. All were well up at the end of the first lap, when the order of the leaders was Sheppard, Meredith, Braun, and Edmundson. Half way around on the second lap Meredith made his effort and caught Sheppard. The pair raced neck and neck into the straight, when Davenport jumped into third place, and, running like a deer, caught Sheppard, who had fallen slightly behind Meredith. This was the position ten yards from home and also at the finish.

The excitement during the race was terrific, and was made more so by the terrible noise caused by thousands of throats yelling injunctions in every language to those in front to "sit down."

When all was over and the announcement was made that Meredith's time was 1 minute and 51 9-10 seconds, with Sheppard and Davenport only one-tenth of a second behind, the American contingent broke into an uproar, and the scene when the Stars and Stripes were hoisted at the three poles for the second time in two days exceeded in enthusiasm and noise anything yet seen or heard in the stadium.

All three runners went on to the finish of the half mile, and Meredith succeeded in breaking the world's record held by the Italian, Lunghi, doing it in 1 minute and 52½ seconds, as against Lunghi's record of 1 minute 52 4-5 seconds.

Next to this great triumph came the achievements in the high jump in which Americans won first and third places. The winner, A. W. Richards of Salt Lake City, whose inclusion in the team was at one time doubtful, according to Commissioner Sullivan, jumped superbly. In his final jump of 193 centimeters he cleared the bar with a couple of inches to spare. C. L. Horine of Leland Stanford University, whose wonderful performances at home had aroused great expectations, could do no better than 189 centimeters, earning third place.

In the semi-final of the 400 meters relay race the American quartet, contesting against the Britsh team, were disqualified owing to Belote passing the billet, required in this race, to Wilson out of bounds. Otherwise it looked as if they would have captured the final.

The final of the 10,000 meters flat race was notable for the great running of the Indian Tewanima, who did not fall into the mistake of following the cracking pace set by Kolehmainen of Finland, who is the greatest distance runner of the present day. Unfortunately Louis Scott, who was looked on as the American hope, did, and paid the penalty for making the attempt.

Other points for the United States were picked up in the standing broad jump by the brothers Platt and Ben

SUMMER HOTEL AT ALLENHURST BURNS

NO WATER TO FIGHT FIRE

Cottages of Well-Known New Yorkers Catch Fire from Spark Borne by a High Wind—Two Overcome.

Special to The New York Times.

ALLENHURST, N. J., July 8.—The Dunes, a Summer hotel here, burned to the ground about 5 o'clock this afternoon. A fifteen-thousand-dollar garage owned by A. M. Wittenberg was set afire by flying firebrands and completely destroyed, and the cottages of Harry Content, the New York broker, and of George Ehret, the brewer, caught fire, but were saved by garden hose and by smothering the flames with carpets. The belongings of the guests were lost, for the hotel burned so quickly there was no chance to save them. A stiff breeze was blowing, and for a while it appeared as though all the cottages in the immediate vicinity, one of the best-known cottage colonies near New York, were doomed to destruction.

The Dunes stood on a high embankment overlooking the ocean, one block north of the Allen Beach Club. The hotel was an old five-story frame building, and was entertaining about 150 guests, principally from Philadelphia and New York.

The blaze was discovered by a young woman who had been in bathing. She notified the clerk, who rushed through the house, warning the guests. The few guests who were in the hotel at the time had little time to gather any personal belongings, for the flames gained rapid headway, and less than fifteen minutes after the first signs of the fire the front and rear walls of the building fell.

In the mean time a call had been sent to the local volunteer Fire Department of Allenhurst and to Asbury Park, to which two steamers and two hose companies responded. Their services were useless, however, for there was no water in the hydrants and the steamers were not equipped with facilities to pump from the ocean. It was soon seen that the hotel was doomed, and the services of the firemen were used in putting out minor blazes which occurred in near-by cottages.

The location of the hotel is so high that the fire was plainly visible as far south as Spring Lake and as far north as Long Branch. This attracted a large crowd, and in a few minutes automobiles were speeding toward the scene. It is estimated that at least 30,000 persons were on hand to view the fire, and, incidentally, impede the work of the fire fighters, long before the fire burned itself out. The value of the hotel was placed at $60,000 and the personal loss of the guests at $50,000. The building was owned by R. S. Shultz.

Two persons were overcome by smoke and carried from the burning hotel by volunteer firemen. They were J. E. Maul of New York and Mrs. Horton of Montclair. Mrs. Edward Earl, wife of the President of the National Nassau Bank, New York, was taking a nap when the fire was discovered, but was aroused and left before the flames reached her apartments.

The home of Mrs. Benjamin Guggenheim, widow of the financier lost on the Titanic, caught fire from flying firebrands, but the flames were put out by means of a garden hose in the hands of a fireman. The roof of the stucco cottage of Harry Content caught fire repeatedly, but was as many times extinguished. George Ehret's home twice caught fire, but the flames were put out. The cottage of S. Tate of New York, occupied by Searles Babbitt, a broker, likewise caught fire, and for a while it looked as though it would be destroyed. After much effort the blaze was extinguished by means of pails of water and by smothering it with blankets and rugs.

The hotel might have been saved had it not been for the drought in this section. For over two weeks there has been little or no rainfall, and the fire hose of the hotel was rendered useless, owing to the lack of water in the tanks and reservoir.

AVIATORS ORGANIZE.

Plan "to Save the Lives of Remaining American Flyers."

CHICAGO, July 6.—"The American Aviator's Association," founded "to save the lives of remaining American flyers" was organized to-day at the flying field of The Aero Club of Illinois. Permanent organization will be completed on July 20, when every aeroplane operator in the United States, licensed or unlicensed, is expected by the Chicago airmen to become affiliated with the organization.

Members pledge themselves not to fly in an aeroplane they do not think safe, regardless of jeers or accusations of cowardice; they agree to seek action through the national aeronautical body against managers or employers who seek to force aviators into unsafe flights, and they have arranged for a mutual exchange of experiences.

"We do not yet know the air," said Andrew Drew, regarding the association of which he is the founder. "Every time a flyer goes up he meets some new peculiarity. If we put this knowledge to common use we shall learn something.

"The association will conduct intelligent investigations of all aviation accidents accessible, and expects to gain information which will put a stop to the aviation death rate. No one knows how many deaths are due to constructural defects, such as newly licensed pilots encounter in flying new machines, and which they seldom dare demand be changed for fear of being accused of cowardice. We are going to protect ourselves."

SHIP STRIKERS FIGHT POLICE WITH PISTOLS

One Man Killed on Strikers' Side and Two Policemen Wounded, One of Them Mortally.

STRIKEBREAKER SHOT IN LEG

Reserves Save a Patrolman from Death at the Hands of a South Street Mob and Battle Follows.

A mob of striking firemen from coastwise steamers and their sympathizers battled for many minutes last night with policemen from the Oak Street, Old Slip, Madison, and Delancey Street Stations, exchanging shot for shot with the policemen and scattering only when the police who had been firing over their heads, threatened to sent their next bullets into the ranks of the strikers. Behind them when they ran they left one wounded man, who died before he could be placed on the operating table in the Volunteer Hospital.

In Brooklyn, almost at the time this mob was fighting the police, a Spanish fireman, a striker, fired two bullets into a fireman who had refused to leave his ship, and then shot two policemen who pursued him. One of the policemen was rushed to a hospital dying.

The fight in Manhattan originated when several strikebreakers started boldly to walk along South Street. It was only yesterdav that the strike, which has been in operation against coastwise steamers for a week, was extended to the Ward Line, the Bridgeport, and the New Haven Lines, which have piers in the East River.

Striking firemen sighted the strikebreakers at Dover Street. It was about 8:30 P. M. and the street was crowded. Instantly a shower of bricks and bottles fell around the strikebreakers and a mob of angry firemen closed in on them. Policeman Dougherty of the Oak Street Station reached the men just as the strikers came up. He laid about him with his nightstick and threatened to shoot if the crowd did not disperse. While he held the strikers at bay the strikebreakers made off, and Dougherty, the incipient riot having been quelled, strolled toward Roosevelt Street.

Strikers Use Revolvers in Attack.

He got there just in time to see a Greek strikebreaker and a Spanish striker fighting desperately. He jumped between them and grabbed each man by the collar. He had started with them toward the station house when the crowd he had scattered in South Street came running up, their numbers increased until there were fully 500 men in the crowd.

They fell on Dougherty and snatched his prisoners from him. While some of them beat up the Greek the others turned to Dougherty, whom they knocked down, and were beating him badly when Joseph Pratt of 20 James Slip started toward the Oak Street Station shouting for the police.

He burst in on Lieut. Collins with the cry that a mob of strikers was murdering a policeman only a block or so away, and Collins turned out the reserves and telephoned to Police Headquarters whence orders were sent to the other station houses for the reserves there to join in the rescue.

The reserves found Policeman Mahoney, Tiernan, O'Connor and O'Rourke of the Oak Street Station already at Dougherty's side. They had beaten their way through the crowd, but the latter had closed in about them and bricks and bottles were falling in showers about them.

Already several revolvers had been drawn in the crowd of strikers, and as the reserves came up several shots were fired. At the appearance of reinforcements, however, the mob fled toward James Slip, firing back of them as they ran, and the police returned the fire, trying, however, to fire over the heads of the crowd and only intimidate them.

From roofs and windows in James Slip and South Street, whither the crowd ran, came more bottles, bricks, and heavy kitchen utensils, which fell about the policemen and the strikers alike.

But those on the roofs and in the windows were braver than those in the street, now that the policemen had begun to use their revolvers, and at South Street the mob broke in all directions, scuttling for cover. Thirty or forty of the men ran into José Juarez's lodging house at 21 James Slip, and Lieut. Lake and several of the reserves followed them. They gathered some twenty men in the house and made them prisoners.

Policeman Mahoney meantime had searched through the areaway, and there he found a man unconscious with a bullet wound in the back of his head, just behind his left ear. He called Dr. Savage from the Volunteer Hospital and the man was rushed there. He died as he was being carried to the operating table. Some of the prisoners identified him as a Spanish fireman named Palmieri. They did not know his first name.

Three men who talked with James Vidall, Secretary of the Firemen's Union, when he appeared at the Oak Street Station, insisted that Palmieri had been killed by a policeman who fired at him without provocation when Palmieri objected to his order to move on from a corner in South Street where he stood with some friends.

Detectives were scattered through the district last night trying to locate the ringleaders of the riot. The prisoners taken in the lodging houses were locked up in the Oak Street Station.

Shot Two Pursuing Policemen.

The fight in Brooklyn occurred in Hamilton Avenue near Imlay Street. The reports of two revolver shots started Policemen Hanley, Williams and McMillan of the Hamilton Avenue station running to the place, and Hanley arrived in time to see a man with a revolver in his hand running down Hamilton Avenue. He gave chase and had almost caught the man when the fugitive turned and fired at the policeman, his bullet going through Hanley's right lung.

Hanley fell while his assailant kept on along Hamilton Avenue. Williams had come up in time to see Hanley fall and he also caught sight of the fugitive as he turned in Bowne and Imlay Street, and in a few paces had caught up with him. Once more the man turned and once more he fired, his bullet this time passing through William's right thigh. The policeman fell as Hanley had, but once more a policeman had come up in time to see his brother officer fall.

This time it was McMillan who sighted the fugitive and who chased him through Bowne Street to Van Brunt and then to Rappelyea, and finally to a lumber yard at Columbia Street and Hamilton Avenue. The man backed against a pile of lumber and waited for McMillan to come up. As the policeman approached the man fired the last shot in his revolver. McMillan, who had been expecting it, dropped, and the bullet went through his hat, knocking it from his head. Then he closed with the man. He knocked the revolver from his hand and hammered him to the ground with blows of his club. At last, subdued and almost unconscious, the man gave up the fight, and McMillan started to lead him to the Hamilton Avenue Station.

But behind the man since his first shots had trailed a crowd respectful of him while the man could shoot, but intent now only on beating him or killing him. The crowd closed in on McMillan and his prisoner with shouts of "Kill him! Hang him! Don't let him escape!"

McMillan drew his revolver and threat-

JOHN D., 73, SAYS 'EAT LESS.'

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, July 8.—"Eat less and you'll keep cool," was John D. Rockefeller's advice given to-day, which was the seventy-third anniversary of his birth.

Mr. Rockefeller was in fine health and celebrated the day by defeating several friends at golf, playing his best game in years. The Rev. Dr. W. W. Bustard, his pastor; Dr. H. F. Biggar, Sr., and Dr. E. B. Rhodes, his physicians, and W. C. Schofield, a former business associate and old friend, assembled at Forest Hill early in the morning to help him celebrate. They met him on the golf links. Mr. Rockefeller and Dr. Bustard won the opening contest, for driving. Mr. Rockefeller won the golf game.

"It's fine to be a minister on Monday morning," remarked Dr. Bustard, as they were walking toward the house.

"It's fine to be anybody in good health on such a day," said Mr. Rockefeller. "I'm feeling as fine as I ever did in my life. The trouble with most people in warm weather is that they eat too much. That is bad. It makes one feel the heat so much more. I am 73 to-day. I take great care to diet to suit weather conditions. I exercise. I think that is the secret."

At the house the party had light refreshments, and later greeted several persons from Youngstown, who had called to see Mr. Rockefeller. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Rockefeller dined alone, a birthday cake being part of the menu.

FINDS MISSING PUPIL.

Teacher Traces Him Through a Story in The Times.

When Mrs. Elizabeth Knapp, Principal of Public School No. 12, Yonkers, read in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday morning of two little runaways in the custody of the Children's Society in Manhattan, the name of one of the waifs attracted her attention. The youngster in question had given his name to the officials of the society as Frank Kasell, and it suggested to Mrs. Knapp the name of one of her pupils, Frank Gozell, of 4 Fagin Street, Yonkers. She decided to investigate and yesterday visited the headquarters of the society at Twenty-second Street and Fourth Avenue. She found she had been right and little Frank was restored to his parents.

The boy had been missing since June 22, and was picked up a few days ago at 116th Street and Lexington Avenue. His parents had concluded that the boy had been drowned as he was fond of swimming.

IRON PLANT SOLD FOR JUNK.

A. E. Tower Closed It After His Wife Sued for a Separation.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., July 8.—The Poughkeepsie Iron Company furnaces, once the city's leading industry, but which were closed by A. Edward Tower when his wife, Mary Bogardus Tower, a former telephone girl, sued him for separation several years ago, were sold to-day as junk.

Mr. Tower inherited the business from his father, Albert E. Tower, who established it in 1869. It was then worth $200,000. Annoyed by the publicity of the separation suit, Mr. Tower disposed of his property here and closed the mill, which was taken over by Edward S. Atwater as receiver. No attempt was made to reopen the mill.

A Kingston junk dealer to-day purchased the buildings and machinery. The land will now be sold.

WOMAN WORRIES ASBURY.

Mrs. Benjamin Sends Strangely Marked Letters to Prominent Men.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., July 8.—Mrs. Addie Benjamin, who has had apartments at the Hotel Columbia since yesterday, was invited to-day to visit Chief of Police Smith at headquarters. After registering at the hotel, the police say, she began to send letters to prominent men in town, including Mayor Bennett and Chief Smith. The letters bore no stamps, but where the stamps should have been strange characters were penciled.

Mrs. Benjamin said she was representing President Taft in the Secret Service and had marked the letters with a special frank privilege sign. She had with her a little girl who is registered as Ruth Benjamin.

Mrs. Benjamin told the police she was formerly the wife of D. C. Webb, proprietor of a New York hotel, but had been divorced from him. Her father, she says, was D. W. Benjamin, who was prominent in New Jersey politics. She speaks Franch and Italian. She returned to the hotel, and will remain there pending the arrival of friends.

SPEAKING OF COMMANDMENTS

Congressman Suggests Contemplation of Three by Colonel's Managers.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Representative Ebenezer Hill of Connecticut, a Republican member of the House Ways and Means Committee, made the following comment on the National Progressive platform to-day:

"The Ten Commandmants as a whole would make a mighty good platform for any party, but Dixon ought not to stop with one of them. In view of the Progressive platform being given out Sunday, I would suggest that they at least add 'Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy,' and also, for the benefit of the prospective candidate, 'Thou shalt not covet anything that is thy neighbor's,' and, finally, for the benefit of Dixon himself, he should add, 'Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.'"

8-HOUR DAY IS UPHELD.

New Ruling Affects Every Laborer Employed by United States.

WASHINGTON, July 8—Attorney General Wickersham has rendered an opinion which will extend the eight hour labor law to every mechanic and laborer employed by the United States.

Previous interpretations of the law confined its operation mainly to "public works," such as fortifications, buildings, &c. The question was raised in conection with the 1,000 laborers at customs ports.

GAMORRIST LEADERS GET 30-YEAR TERMS

With Solitary Confinement—Di Marinas Cuts His Throat When He Hears His Fate.

SEVEN YEARS FOR PRIEST

Maximum for "Erricone," Head of the Organization—Convicted Men in Cage Act Like Wild Beasts.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

VITERBO, July 8.—The trial of the Camorrist leaders ended here to-day after the proceedings had lasted seventeen months and six years after the murders of which the Camorrists were charged.

The survivors of the forty-one men who were originally placed on trial were all found guilty of criminal conspiracy, but only five were declared guilty of the actual murder. These five and three others, including Alfano, (Erricone,) were sentenced each to thirty years' solitary imprisonment.

The trial ended with a final outburst of shrieks, gestures, oaths, and curses such as had characterized the proceedings from the start.

One of the prisoners in the cage, Di Marinas, cut his throat and sank bleeding to the floor on hearing his thirty-year sentence. Women fainted, men shouted, and the utmost confusion prevailed.

The murders were committed in June, 1906, when Gennaro Cuocolo,a former Camorra leader, was found stabbed to death on the lower slope of Mount Vesuvius. On the same night his wife was murdered in Naples.

Of the forty-one men arrested three have died and fifteen were releasd after serving terms in jail equal to the maximum sentences that could have been imposed if they had been found guilty of the charges against them.

The trial cost $80,000. The unhappy jury had been imprisoned since March, 1911. The jurors in their verdict had to answer 144 questions.

The official reports of the proceedings fill sixty-three volumes and about 40,000 pages.

Most of the counsel spoke for several weeks on end.

VITERBO, July 8.—The Camorrists who have been on trial for seventeen months on the charge of having murdered Gennaro Cuocolo and his wife in June, 1906, were to-day adjudged guilty in varying degrees.

The verdict declares Corrado Sortino guilty of both murders; Nicolo Morra, Antonio Cerrato, and Mariano Di Gennaro guilty of the murder of Cuocolo, and Giuseppe Salvi guilty of the murder of Cuocolo's wife.

Enrico Alfano, the alleged leader of the Camorrists; Giovanni Rapi, Treasurer of the Camorra; Di Marinas and the others are convicted of being instigators of the crime, and members of a criminal organization.

The President of the court immediately sent for the condemned men. Sortino, Cerrato, Salvi, Morra, Di Gennaro, Alfano, Rapi, and Di Marinas, were sentenced to thirty years' imprisonment and to ten years' police surveillance; Di Matteo to ten years and soix months' imprisonment and ten years' surveillance; Ascrittore to ten years' imprisonment and three years' surveillance, Ciro Vitozzi, the priest, to seven years' imprisonment and two years' surveillance; the others to five years' imprisonment and three years' surveillance.

When the accused men were placed in the iron cage to hear the sentences Di Marinas suddenly drew forth a piece of glass and cut his throat. He fell to the floor of the cage in a pool of blood, and there was general pandemonium. The other prisoners screamed like wild animals, shouting invectives and imprecations.

The pronouncing of the sentences was received with uproarious protests from the condemned men. One of them shouted: "We are innocent. This is legal assassination." Some of them shook their fists at the Judge, and others tore at the bars of the cage. They attempted in concert to harangue those assembled in the court.

The Presiding Judge resumed his summing up of the evidence with fresh vigor this morning, taking the greatest pains to explain to the jury the exact position of each of the accused and the significance of each of the 144 questions which the jury must answer. All the accused, in contrast to their conduct afterward, maintained a calm demeanor. Ciro Vitozzi, the priest, muttered prayers all the time, saying, "I am in the hands of God and of the jurors, whom I pray the Almighty to illuminate."

"Erricone" made a last protest, saying:

"I have committed no crime. Indeed, my poor brother was literally murdered while he was a prisoner, and I myself should have died of a broken heart if all my strength had not been used to keep me alive to hear the sentence of absolution. The jury cannot be deceived by such an infamous caluminator"—and "Erricone" pointed to Abbatemaggio, with tigerish glances.

Giovanni Rapi remarked: "I was abroad, but willingly gave myself up, trusting to the justice of my country, which cannot fail."

Corrado Sortino exclaimed: "We are not murderers, but murdered."

Gennaro Ibello, head of the Camorra in the Vesuvian villages, with eyes red from weeping, remarked:

"The Crown Prosecutor withdrew the accusation against me. Therefore, I am practically acquitted. I have, however, spent five years in prison and lost $10,000. My house has been destroyed and my wife died from a broken heart. If I am set free I shall be a beggar."

Abbatemaggio, the informer, remained serene and almost jovial, saying: "I have told the whole truth. I have not a single word to change. Those are the murderers of the Cuscolos."

In the belief that the trial would come to a conclusion to-day, great excitement prevailed all over the town. Reinforcements of troops and mounted police arrived to assist in maintaining order. A body of 300 police was especially entrusted with the surveillance of the court and its precincts.

A number of relations of the accused, comprising wives, sisters, and mothers, arrived here this morning, bringing a votive offering of wax candles to the Madonna, while others brought gifts for St. Rosa, the patron saint of Viterbo. Many of the women took up their positions early to-day in the church facing the Court House, where they remained kneeling, beating their breasts, and imploring mercy for their relatives.

At the time when the sentences were pronounced in addition to the police and carabiniers within the building, a battalion of troops with fixed bayonets was drawn up outside. It was feared that some attempt might be made to rescue the prisoners.

The verdict on the whole is somewhat of a surprise, and all are agreed that the severity of the sentences is the last blow to the Cammorra, which has practically been annihilated since the arrest of its leaders.

HIS STATE DELEGATES AT WILSON'S TABLE

All but Smith, Who Prefers to Eat His Political Crow in Private.

NUGENT THERE, AND PLEASED

Governor Asked Not to Resign Now, Probably Won't—Hudspeth Wants McCombs Made Chairman.

Special to The New York Times.

SEA GIRT, N. J., July 8.—It was "Old Home Day" at New Jersey's Little White House to-day, and there came to greet Gov. Wilson this afternoon all of New Jersey's delegates to the Baltimore convention except former Senator James Smith, Jr., all of the alternates, including the alternate for Mr. Smith, and about every one residing along the Jersey coast who has any interest in political affairs. Of course, the wives of the delegates and alternates came also, and the mistress of the Little White House and her three charming daughters had once again an opportunity to demonstrate how completely their hospitality captures and holds all who come into contact with it.

The visit of the New Jersey delegates to the home of the Democratic Presidential candidate brought out emphatically these three political facts:

First—There is a practically overwhelming demand that Gov. Wilson continue to reside in the State's Little White House until he finds it absolutely necessary to move his family to the larger White House at Washington.

Second—That Robert S. Hudspeth, who has been considered the leading rival of Col. W. F. McCombs for appointment as Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, wishes to be considered as entirely out of the running, and in every sense a supporter of Col. McCombs for the place.

Third—That James R. Nugent, who became famous as an antagonist of Gov. Wilson and was ousted from the Democratic State Chairmanship after offering a toast insulting to the Governor was willing to and did march up in the file of the Essex County delegation to shake hands with the Governor and to shake hands also with Dennis F. Collins, Chairman of the committee which sent to him the letter demanding that he step down and out from the leadership of the Democratic Party in New Jersey.

Nugent Loud in Praise of Governor.

While every one recognized the fact that the occasion was a hard one for Nugent, in which, as one of his colleagues expressed it, the deposed leader was "swallowing hard to down his bit of political crow," no one was disposed to jest or make the situation embarrassing for him.

Gov. Wilson's greeting to Nugent was identical with that to the other delegates who preceded or followed him. It was merely "How do you do," spoken without the slightest tone of either resentment or especial cordiality. The impression throughout was merely that Nugent came as one among many and received the uniformly courteous greeting extended to all.

As Nugent emerged from Gov. Wilson's home after breaking bread at luncheon with men who for a long time had been his bitter enemies, he broke into extravagant praise of his host and pledges that he would be found fighting for him to the full extent of his ability.

One version widely circulated was that Representative Edward W. Townsend of "Chimmie Fadden" fame went ahead of Nugent and said to Gov. Wilson, "I wish to introduce to you, Governor, a good Democrat from Essex," and that Nugent, putting out his hand at the psychological moment, was received with a hearty laugh. Mr. Townsend's part in the introduction was not observed, if it occurred, by several witnesses of Nugent's arrival, however, and the story was finaly discredited.

While the Jersey folk observed Nugent's action and congratulated him upon his present course, they looked anxiously about from time to time to see if former Senator Smith was anywhere about. Instead of hearing from him directly, the visitors were permitted to see a telegram addressed by the former New Jersey boss to Democratic State Chairman Edward E. Grosscup.

Smith Would Eat His in Private.

From this telegram it appeared that all that kept ex-Senator Smith away was the fact that he had not gone to his office to open his mail until this morning, and so had not received in time the invitation to accompany the New Jersey delegation to Sea Girt. There was an expression of regret that he had not received the invitation earlier, but no direct statement as to the ex-Senator's present attitude toward the party's candidate.

Private assurances were offered by close friends of Smith that the former Senator was perfectly willing to eat his share of crow, but begged the temporary indulgence of doing it in private at the start, instead of in so open a manner as that of a visit at this time to Gov. Wilson's home.

The folk from the Jersey coast entertained Gov. Wilson for hours with intimate stories about their well-known citizens, and they thoroughly diverted him from the political cares and burdens that have so marked the sudden entrance of Sea Girt into rivalry with Oyster Bay and Beverly as National Summer Capitals.

At the close of his afternoon with the Jerseyites Gov. Wilson smiled on each one an affectionate farewell, and of his guests he said:

"It has been a very delightful day, and it was an impressive thing to see the Jerseymen come in such force, and show such genuine and generous enthusiasm. Moreover, there were so many old friends among them that I was able to get all sorts of useful counsel and information from them. I was made to feel how thoroughly the working force of the State was behind me."

A visitor who added much good humor to the occasion was the blind Senator from Oklahoma, Thomas P. Gore.

Blind Senator Astonishes Governor.

Senator Gore, from a comfortable arm chair on the breezy side of the veranda of Gov. Wilson's home, greeted each member of the New Jersey delegation to Baltimore and rehearsed with them so many complicated facts and figures that Gov. Wilson was astonished at the blind Senator's faculty for holding difficult data in mind.

Gov. Wilson held a private conference with Senator Gore for an hour after the New Jersey visitors had gone.

"Isn't it wonderful how Senator Gore keeps his facts in mind?" said Gov. Wilson after he had bidden his visitor good-bye. "He and I cantered all over the field of Democratic Party affairs. We went over the merits of what had happened and Senator Gore expressed his joy at the happy outcome of it all, with the general freedom from after-convention bitterness."

Senator Gore put a seemingly clinching argument upon the question of whether or not Gov. Wilson should resign as Governor.

"Don't do it, Governor," the blind Senator put in, as he heard John W. Wescott, who nominated Gov. Wilson at Baltimore, talking over with him the matter of his possible resignation. "Don't do it," he repeated, "for whoever heard of a Good Democrat resigning a job?"

Of Gov. Wilson's chance of election Senator Gore could not speak except in superlatives.

Says Wilson Is Embodied Progress.

"That nomination at Chicago," he said, "was a burial at sea. You could not get a live one to have anything to do with it. We scored a great triumph at Baltimore. There was glory enough for us all. We will duplicate the victory in November.

"The Democratic Party is a unit, battling as one man under Wilson's leadership for real Democracy. We have a chieftain who is not revolutionary on the one hand nor reactionary on the other. He simply embodies the real spirit of progress. I cannot say too often, and I want this to go down, that Gov. Wilson is wise enough to know that too swift arrives as tardily as too slow.

"On the other hand, the Republican Party is distracted and dismembered. The reactionary forces are in the minority in the party. The insurgent element in the Republican Party will be divided into three encampments. Party ties are a powerful bondage, and a few Progressives will support Taft, but this will be a negligible number.

"The vast majority of them will support Roosevelt, many of them out of enthusiasm or infatuation for their leader. But a considerable number of the Progressive Republicans will support Wilson; those of them who are determined to defeat the stand-pat element in the Republican Party and who intend to eliminate risk from the proposition. They will take the bond of fate and support Wilson in order to make assurance doubly sure.

"There are few States that are on the impossible list in this campaign. The Democrats are organizing and conducting a vigorous, thorough-going campaign."

Concerning the problem of selecting a National Chairman, Senator Gore said that the first requisite in a candidate must be that he show a record of entire sympathy with Gov. Wilson's ideas and ideals, and second, that he "know politics." He said he was heartily in favor of the idea of leaving the matter of the selection entirely in the hands of Gov. Wilson. "And I have no doubt," he added, "that all Democrats, on the committee and off the committee, will rest entirely satisfied with his selection."

Why Wilson May Not Resign.

When the Jersey delegates came to Sea Girt they were not so united on the question of Gov. Wilson continuing in office as Governor as they were when they went away. The matter was warmly discussed among the groups on the veranda of the Little White House and on the lawns surrounding it.

At first several politicians who are planning to run for office, and who looked at the matter from the standpoint of party expediency, insisted that the Governor should resign. They said that his name as Presidential candidate would swing into office an entire State Democratic ticket and that some strong democrat at the head of this ticket would be assured of election for a full term, whereas an appointee named next January to fill out an unexpired term would precipitate an election in the off-political year of 1913.

They urger also that it would show greater confidence on the part of Gov. Wilson.

Gen. Dennis F. Collins, treasurer of the Democratic State Committee, volunteered to do missionary service among those who wished Gov. Wilson to step out.

You all know, he argued, that Gov. Wilson had never had a harmonious Senate and Assembly. With the approaching Democratis victory, he can round out and perfect his administration. If he resigns now, it means ex-Senator Jim Smith will rise up in his political grave and precipitate an ugly factional fight. He will back Frank Katzenbach of Trenton for Governor against Wilson't friend, Otto Wittpenn of Jersey City, and this fight will muss up the National campaign.

"The thing we must do is to see to it that the next President of the State Senate is the kind of man we would like to have for Governor, and then let him step ahead when Gov. Wilson moves from our little White House to the other White House. That is the safe, the certain way."

One by one each visitor present acquiesced in the view of Gen. Collins, and John W. Wescott of Camden, who placed Gov. Wilson's name before the Democratic Convention, was delegated to assure the Governor that it was the unanimous wish of all present that he "stick."

Through Congressman William Hughes of Passaic a request was presented to Gov. Wilson that he consent to an interview with Samuel Gompers and other officers of the American Federation of Labor. Gov. Wilson said he would be willing to meet Mr. Gompers and his associates Tuesday afternoon at Trenton after his meeting with the heads of State departments.

Justice Gerard Promises Support.

Through his secretary, Thomas D. McCarthy, Supreme Court Justice Gerard, who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor of New York, sent a message to Gov. Wilson to the effect that while his first choice had been Clark, he was heartily in favor of Gov. Wilson, and would do all in his power to further his interests in New York.

Four visitors from Indiana took home for good luck, as did the visitors from New Jersey, little cubes of the cake served by Mrs. Wilson and her daughters at the buffet luncheon. The Indiana visitors were Joseph E. Bell, who was Chairman of the Committee on Credentials of the Baltimore Convention; William H. O'Brien, Crawford Fairbanks, and Joseph H. Shea, a Democratic candidate for Supreme Court Justice in his State.

To-morrow morning Gov. Wilson leaves here for Trenton at 7:40 o'clock. He will spend the day at the State House, and in the evening will go to Atlantic City.

On Friday National Committeeman Hudspeth of New Jersey, who will represent Gov. Wilson at the meeting of the National Committee in Chicago, will come to Sea Girt for a final conference preceding his departure for Chicago. Mr. Hudspeth said that while he would not accept an appointment as the National Committee's Chairman he would gladly accept the post of Eastern manager of the Wilson campaign or a place on the campaign manager's Executive Committee.

OSBORN STRONG FOR WILSON.

Republican Governor of Michigan Calls Roosevelt Men Malcontents.

LANSING, Mich., July 8.—Gov. Chase S. Osborn of Michigan, in a statement issued late to-day, expressed the hope that "all good Republicans will refuse to join the malcontents" in the formation of a new party, and said that those who were not satisfied with Mr. Taft as a Presidential candidate could get what they desired by voting for Woodrow Wilson.

The Governor's statement follows:

"I am not inconsistent in the position I have taken that Republicans need not bolt their party and will not be considered as having bolted if they vote for Woodrow Wilson. Many of the most prominent and influential Democrats in the country did not vote for or support Mr. Bryan. They remained Democrats nevertheless, and are all supporting Woodrow Wilson now.

"I do not think a new party erected upon the passions of any number of men can live. When those who are righteously angry because of the action at Chicago come to their senses they will discover that they are angry at certain men in the Republican Party, and not at the splendid old party itself.

"I wish to reassert and re-emphasize that the issue is as clear as a deep-toned bell. One-half the work necessary to create a new party directed to purify the Republican Party will produce tenfold better results.

"I hope all good Republicans will refuse to join the malcontents in a new party. I do not mean by this that temporary measures should not be taken to present the name of Theodore Roosevelt and to give the people an opportunity to vote for him, but whatever steps are taken to do this, I hope it will be clearly understood that they are temporary.

"Personally I am still of the opinion that those who are not satisfied with Mr. Taft can get just exactly what they desire by voting for Woodrow Wilson."

ROOSEVELT TO TRADE WITH BOTH PARTIES

Discusses Plans to Support Local Democrats or Republicans Who Will Support Him.

FIXING A NEW YORK DICKER

By Such Means He Thinks the Progressives May Break the "Solid South."

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July 8.—A series of political trades, as a result of which the Progressive Party will throw its support to either the regular Republican or Democratic nominees in several of the States in return for assistance in electing the Roosevelt Presidential Electors, is expected to figure significantly in the campaign next Fall. Col. Roosevelt gave an inkling of this scheme to-day in discussing the situation in New York State. William M. Chadbourne, a member of the Republican County Commitee, had just closed a conference with the Colonel, who, in explaining their talk, said:

"Chadbourne told me that a majority of the Republican organization men would be with Roosevelt as the only man who could carry the State. They are going to have in certain districts in New York Republicans and Democrats who will also be nominated on the Progressive ticket and who will support the Presidential Electors of the Progressive Party."

This comes as a complete change of plans, for only a few days ago the Colonel announced that a full ticket would be placed in the field in New York from Governor to School Superintendent. He indicated to-day that if any of the organization Republicans or Democrats were indorsed by the Progressives it would probably be Assemblymen or, perhaps, Congressmen.

Delegations from the Seventeenth and Nineteenth Assembly Districts in Manhattan, headed by D. P. Carey, President of the Hudson Republican Club and Frederick M. Williams, President of the Claremont Republican Club, were at Sagamore Hill to-day. They told the Progressive leader that there would be wholesale desertions from the Taft-Barnes ranks in New York, and that the situation was one with many possibilities. They did not want Taft, they said, and had no faith in the ability of William Barnes, Jr., to carry the State for Taft. They even went so far as to say that Roosevelt would have an even chance of winning in the State.

"Do you think that you have a good chance to carry the State?" Col. Roosevelt was asked afterward.

"I must give the same answer that I did while the primary fight was going on," he replied. "I am a better warrior than a prophet."

The others in the delegations from Manhattan were Assemblyman Andrew F. Murray, Walter M. Chandler, Dr. P. H. Sagat, Hugh Gordon Miller, Judge James D. Andrews, Leonard M. Wallstein, David W. Armstrong, N. H. Pferrer, Thomas M. Belknap, Robert P. Lewis, J. C. Freehoff, and O. L. Gooding. Judge Andrews acted as spokesman. All he would say afterward, however, was that they had just been up to see the greatest man on earth. Then he added with a laugh that the Colonel had served them with ice water.

Col. Roosevelt was asked in what States extensive dickering with the other parties would be carried on—whether it would be followed in Illinois, Pennsylvania, and Ohio.

"I am not prepared to speak about the situation in other States," he replied. "I want them to work out their own plans."

The Colonel said that he had been counting all along on receiving the support for his third party of the Progressive Republicans in a number of States, such as South Dakota, where Roosevelt Electors have already been named by the Republicans. It is expected that his plan to effect trades with the other parties will probably form a part of his campaign to break the "solid South." Not long ago he said that the situation might arise in some Southern States where Democrats who were acceptable to the Progressive Party would be indorsed if they would throw their support to him in return.

The Colonel said his plan for the States generally had to be carefuly treated, and that he had written a letter, which would probably be made public by William Allen White, in which that feature had been discussed.

When the fact that only three of the seven Roosevelt Governors had signed the call for the Progressive Convention was called to the Colonel's attention with the suggestion that it had occasioned some comment, he showed a lively interest.

"I am glad you called my attention to that," he exclaimed. "I have received plaintive telegrams from William Allen White and others who were not among the signers. It was entirely an oversight. Suggestions as to the signers came from the States themselves and I had nothing to do with it."

He said that Gov. Stubbs had never been asked to sign. The situation was the same with Gov. Stubbs as with Gov. Hadley of Missouri. They had not been asked to sign the call because the leaders of the Progressive movement wanted them to work out the plans in their own States as they thought best. But they were with him just the same.

"Why, Stubbs is one of my warmest supporters," he declared.

"And Hadley, too?"

"Yes," he replied.

Effective work is expected from these men in the attempt to swing the Republican strength to the Colonel by working quietly within the party.

HOTCHKISS, NOT WOODRUFF.

Ex-Insurance Superintendent to be State Chairman—Colonel's New Scheme.

It has been finally settled that William H. Hotchkiss will lead the fight for Col. Roosevelt in New York State. He was Superintendent of Insurance while Hughes was Governor, and afterwards, till he resigned. He gave it out in Albany himself last night that he had accepted the State Chairmanship of the Third Party, it having been offered to him by the Provisional Committee.

This will be a surprise to some of the able leaders, who are not exactly of the inner council, because they were counting confidently here last night that Timothy L. Woodruff, who is supposed to know all the ins and outs of the job, having long been State Republican Chairman, would be asked to take the wheel for the Colonel's party. In fact an announcement to that effect was expected to-day. With it, it was thought would come the appointment of William A. Prendergast as Chairman of the National Committee and William Halpin as Chairman of the County Committee. This was really a tentative slate that, it was said, had been submitted by the slatemakers to Col. Roosevelt for approval before the announcement came from Hotchkiss, who also let it be known that his headquarters would be at 1 Madison Avenue.

A day generally barren in political developments was livened up somewhat by a contribution from Col. Roosevelt's pen. This came in the form of a telegram to William Allen White, the author, who is one of the Colonel's principal supporters in Kansas. The telegram was made public through the Colonel's headquarters in the Metropolitan Tower.

In it Col. Roosevelt declared that the Republican Party had no right to its title; that "Barnes, Penrose, Guggenheim & Co." had merely "stolen the doorplate, but had no moral right to the name or to anything else."

In the same breath the Colonel confides to Mr. White that he will not feel put out if in States where there is no real Republican Party the National Progressives annex the title of the Democratic organization and call itself the Progressive Democratic Party wherever that is the "local desire." The Colonel's telegram follows:

You can make this telegram public. Our appeal nationally is, of course, to all men of progressive principles, regardless of past party differences. The action locally must be guided by the needs of the local situation. In any State where there is no real Republican Party I am entirely content that the local organization should call itself by the title of Progressive Democratic, if that is the local desire and if they support the National Progressive Electors.

Where, as in New York, New Mexico, and Colorado, the local organizations of both the Republican and the Democratic Parties are hopelessly bossridden and reactionary, then we must have a straight Progressive ticket from top to bottom, independent of both the old parties. Where, as I understand to be the case in Kansas, South Dakota, California, and other States, the local Republican organization is Progressive and represents the principles for which we stand, I hope they will be able to make the fight locally for good government in whatever effective organizations they have.

I feel that this year in the Progressive Republican States we should have the support of the organization itself. Moreover, I feel that everywhere I have the right to expect the support of the entire rank and file of the Republican Party. I made a straight-out primary fight, and in the States where the Republican voters themselves had the chance to express their wishes I won by 2,000,000 plurality.

The nomination at the Chicago Convention represented nothing whatever but the successful cheating and stealing of the bosses at the expense of the honest and overwhelming majority of the Republican rank and file. These bosses then proceeded to perpetuate their control by the fraudulent and boss-picked organization of the National Committee, which will control the Convention four years hence.

The titular National Republican Party to-day is not the party of the Republican voters, and is not the party of Abraham Lincoln, but purely the party of Messrs. Barnes, Penrose, Guggenheim & Co., who have stolen the doorplate with the name, but have no moral right to the name or to anything else.

Therefore, I hold that every honest Republican who is true to Lincoln's memory and principles must vote with us. Under such conditions the entire local Republican organization in a State like Kansas can rightly continue as such and yet is in duty bound loyally to support the National Progressive electors. Of course, I feel that in every such Progressive Republican State the Progressive Republican candidates for any office should openly support the National Progressive electors and go in the same column on the ticket with them.

Senator Dixon, the Colonel's campaign manager, has gone to Washington to assist in putting Senator Lorimer of Illinois out of the Senate. In his absence Medill McCormick and Edwin V. Sims of Chicago will be in charge here.

WILSON CLUB INCORPORATED.

First One in the State Is the "Downtown Wilson Club."

The first Woodrow Wilson Club of New York State received its certificate of incorporation yesterday from Supreme Court Justice Lehman under the name of the Downtown Wilson Club.

The club, which will have its offices at 261 Broadway, describes as its purpose the furtherance of the candidacy of Gov. Wilson for President and the advocacy of those political principles for which he stands. The club will have three Directors: Harry F. O'Neill, David Bernstein, and William C. Rittenberg. In addition to the Directors, James J. McCormick and Adolph Katzmann were name as incorporators.

Ex-Gov. Patterson Out for the Senate

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 8.—Announcement that ex-Gov. Malcolm R. Patterson is a Democratic candidate for the United States Senate was published here to-day. He seeks the seat made vacant by the death of Senator Robert L. Taylor. Gov. Hooper appointed Newell Saunders, a Republican, to fill out Senator Taylor's unexpired term.

MAN FROM VITERBO SLAIN.

Whether as a Result of Camorra Trial or a Love Affair Is Not Known.

Salvator De Baleo, 30 years old, of 1,141 Powell Street, East New York, recently came here from Viterbo, Italy, famous as the scene of the trial of the Camorra leaders. On last Saturday night he quarreled with two other men over a beautiful country-woman who lives in the East New York colony.

Three men surrounded him yesterday as he stood at the corner of Snediker and Liberty Avenues. Two of them pulled revolvers. Persons near by saw him drop to his knees with a plea for mercy. The men were obdurate. One of them held his pistol close the man's head and fired. As he lay dying a second shot was fired into his head by the other armed man. Then the assassins fled. De Baleo died an hour later in the Bradford Street Hospital.

Whether the Viterbo proceedings involved him in any way, whether he was suspected of being an informer and vendetta declared against him, or whether the quarrel over his pretty young countrywoman, led to his murder the police are unable to determine.

TRAIN STOPPED UNDER RIVER

Excursionists from Coney Island Held Up Twenty Minutes.

A trainload of passengers bound for Manhattan from Brooklyn was held up under the East River at 8:45 last night for twenty minutes because of the failure of a motor on a north-bound train to work properly. The train was crowded with excursionists from Coney Island and Brighton Beach.

Fully two-thirds of the passengers were women and children, but there was no panic.

ened the crowd with it. The men laughed at him and came on. Then McMillan blew his whistle. Policeman McKenna came up with drawn revolver and night stick in his hand. He laid about him until the crowd fell back a trifle, and meanwhile some one had notified the station, only a block and a half away. Presently the reserves came rushing to the scene, and before them the crowd fell back.

In the police station McMillan's prisoner was giving his name as Alexander Savanno and his occupation as fireman aboard the Montussa of the Porto Rican line, though now on strike, when the crowd appeared at the station house carrying a man, whose left leg hung useless where a bullet had passed through it. The injured man was carried into the station house, where he looked at Savanno, and then, pointing at him, declared:

"It was he who shot me."

The wounded man said he was Anscieto Gonzalez, a fireman on the steamer Grenado. He said he had refused to join the strike, and last night, meeting Savanno at Hamilton Avenue and Imlay Street, he had still refused to go over to the strikers.

Then Savanno had drawn his revolver and fired two shots at him, the second striking him in the leg. Savanno then ran.

Gonzalez was sent to the Brooklyn Hospital, where it was said that his injury was not severe.

Dr. Dillemuth came from the Holy Family Hospital and took Hanley and Williams there. The surgeon said that Hanley was dying and could scarcely live through the night. Savanno was locked up on three charges of shooting, one of which will be changed to murder if Hanley dies.

When the American liner St. Louis, from Southampton, docked at her pier yesterday morning, after being delayed twenty-four hours by the fog, two delegates of the Marine Firemen, Oilers, and Water Tenders' Union boarded her and announced to the crew that a strike had been declared against the line.

As is customary, the American firemen were paid off yesterday afternoon, and the officials of the line will not know if any of the man have joined the strikers until Friday next, when the are due to appear and sign articles for the next voyage to Southampton and back.

James Vidall, Secretary of the union, said that 140 firemen and coal passers had left the St. Louis, and that the rest of the crew would quit also. He also said that the crews of the Ward liner Vigilancia and the Savannah liner City of Savannah joined the strikers when they arrived in port yesterday.

The coast lines do not appear to be affected by the strike, as all their vessels are sailing on time with full crews.

National Education Delegates Hear of Political and Business Influences at Work.

HER BACKERS FIGHT ON

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 8.—A bitter fight is being waged in the ranks of delegates to the convention of the National Education Association, now in session in this city, over the candidacy of Miss Grace C. Strachan, District Superintendent of Schools in New York, for the Presidency of the association. It is charged to-night that political and business forces, both in New York and in this city, have been enlisted in the campaign.

Miss Strachan is a candidate on a platform based on the needs of the women members of the association. According to reports circulated among the delegates this evening, members of an educational book combination recently visited Mayor Gaynor of New York and requested him to exert his influence in behalf of Miss Strachan and, if necessary, to pull certain political wires to bring about the result. What the Mayor's reply was is not stated, but it is stated that he did write to Mayor Harrison of this city in behalf of Miss Strachan.

Mayor Harrison, it is said, directed Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, Superintendent of Schools here, to dictate the "proper voting policy" to her "Chicago cohorts." If these refused to be tractable, then Mrs. Young, the present President of the association, was to take the floor and in a rousing speech nominate Miss Strachan. Unfortunately, Mrs. Young refused to heed the mandate, for to-day she went to Miss Strachan and asked her to withdraw from the race for Presidency in favor of Edwin T. Fairchild of Kansas. The New York delegates resented the suggestion and redoubled their campaign efforts, big streamers bearing the candidate's name being distributed broadcast.

Mayor Harrison to-night admitted that he had received a letter from Mayor Gaynor bearing on Miss Strachan's candidacy for the Presidency of the association, but declared that it was more in the nature of a letter of introduction than anything else. He declined to discuss the rumors of political interference.

Miss Strachan's candidacy has been weakened because of the talk of political interference and the support of a book trust. To-night the opinion is expressed that Mr. Fairchild, who is Superintendent of Instruction in the State of Kansas, will be the successful candidate.

Mr. Fairchild said to-night that should he be chosen to the Presidency, one of the features of his administration would be a more general adoption of a uniform system of textbooks now in use in his own State. As to the election he said:

"The matter is a delicate one for me to discuss, but I feel that Miss Strachan is being made a candidate more as a representative of her sex than as an individual. I do not believe that this election should have such a basis."

The Strachan forces were indignant at the midnight caucus last night, which named Supt. Fairchild as a candidate of "the Progressives of eighteen States." Those who took part in the caucus declared that the Strachan supporters had been invited to take part in the caucus if they would agree to abide by the vote there and withdraw their candidate if the majority voted for some one else. They further averred that the Strachan supporters refused to enter into any such agreement.

Promoters of Miss Strachan's candidacy had a different story to offer. They declare they had agreed to take part in a caucus arranged to be held last night at the Chicago Principals' Club. They went there in good faith, they said, and were confronted by a closed door, on which was pinned the notice: "Caucus abandoned by mutual consent."

They woke up this morning, they declared, to learn that the same people whom they had agreed to meet had held another caucus at a place other than that announced without notifying them of the change.

Reports submitted to the association said that of the 20,000,000 public school pupils in the United States, 12,000,000 were being educated in rural schools and that only one-third of the country boys and girls were making a satisfactory showing. Thomas H. Harris, State Superintendent of Schools of Baton Rouge, La., declared the condition of the rural schools was becoming so deplorable it was time for the Federal Government to provide both money and methods to remedy the situation.

Other speakers at the opening session were Jacques W. Redway, Mount Vernon, N. Y., who traced the history of the organization; Thomas W. Bicknell, Providence, R. I.; James M. Greenwood, Superintendent of Schools, Kansas City, Mo.; Ellen C. Sabin, President of Milwaukee-Downer College, Milwaukee, and Carroll G. Pearse, President of the association.

Charges that Irwin Shepard of Winona, Minn., Secretary of the association, was not conducting his proceedings in accordance with the by-laws brought forth sensational incidents before the Board of Directors just before the association opened its convention. Mrs. Young declared that if Mr. Shepard's annual report was adopted "all the teachers in Chicago would be justified in bringing suit for slander against the association."

The portion of the report she referred to charged "stuffing" of the enrollment at the convention in Boston two years ago, when Mrs. Young was chosen President. Mr. Shepard replied to the criticisms from President Carroll G. Pearse and others that he had been attempting merely to weed out "fake" members. Mr. Shepard then explained he had been trying to administer the by-law so as to eliminate all but bona fide members. He charged that heretofore, by paying $2, members had been enrolled to vote at a single meeting.

HEAT DEATH LIST NOW 14.

Four Suicides Also Result from Torrid Weather in Philadelphia.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, July 8.—Fourteen persons have died from heat during the existing hot wave, and reports of prostrations and possible deaths were received frequently to-night.

Besides deaths due to the heat there have been four suicides and five cases of heart failure, all of which can be traced to the terrific humidity, which has driven men out of their minds and made the heart action so rapid that persons with weak hearts were unable to stand the pressure.

The mercury started its climb at 5 o'clock this morning, when it was touching 72 degrees. By noon it had reached 92, and climbed steadily until 5 o'clock, when it touched 95. Unofficial thermometers on the streets showed the mercury all the way up to 103 in the shade.

THREE DEAD IN PITTSBURGH.

Many Prostrated When Mercury Goes Up to 94 in Afternoon.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., July 8.—Three dead and a score prostrated is the record of the hottest day of the Summer in Pittsburgh. The dead are Charles Scholl, who was picked up on the street and died at a police station; Harry Kane, a mill worker, who dropped at South Carson and Sarah Streets and died in the South Side Hospital, and Benjamin Sanderson, who dropped dead in Melrose Avenue.

The mercury was 73 at 6 o'clock this morning. It rose rapidly until 4 this afternoon, when 94 was registered at the Government kiosk. Thousands sought relief in the public bathing stations in three rivers, and extra guards were placed at all pools. The patrol wagons are carrying cracked ice and ice bags to-night, so that first aid can be given every one picked up.

At every engine house in the city a hose is attached to a plug, and drivers of horses are urged to come and have their animals cooled by a bath.

Griscom Sees His Home Burn.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 8.—The Summer home of Clement A. Griscom on Light House Point, at Watch Hill, was badly damaged by fire and water to-day. A blaze started from a defective flue near the roof, and, though the firemen succeeded in extinguishing it, it was not until tons of water had been poured into the house. The damage will amount to many thousands of dollars.

America Leads in Points.

As the result of the day's successes the United States now leads in the number of points scored in the games, having won 59. Sweden stands second, with 51. England is third, with 36—and the rest are nowhere.

Speaking of the day's results, Commissioner Sullivan said:

"It has been a remarkable day, and the boys deserve great credit for their work. Richards proved his worth with a vengeance, especially as the committee was criticised for bringing him.

"Regarding the relay race, had I been the referee I would have disqualified the Americans myself, also England's, for their second man bumped Belote, but the officials did not see it. It is a pity, but law is law, and we would be poor sports to squeal, seeing that the rule is an American one, copied by foreigners."

Mike Murphy expressed his pleasure because Meredith went on to the half mile, because, he said, "I have always had doubts as whether Lunghi ever made the alleged record."

Matt Halpin of New York said:

"A big surprise of the day was the running of Tewanima. Scott tried to follow the pace set by the winner, and died by the wayside.

"In the 800-meter race we expected a very hard race from Braun, and got it, but we also got three men over the line as we expected.

"It was the greatest race I ever witnessed. Twenty-five yards from home five-yards covered the entire four. It was the most terrific drive I ever witnessed, outside of a sprint.

"In the standing broad jump I rather expected the Greek to win, so I was not altogether disappointed."

For the first time since the athletes arrived here, some are out sight-seeing to-night, having finished their racing engagements.

Eight Bunched Near Finish.

By Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, July 8.—When three American flags were raised after the final of the 800 meters flat race to-day, they proclaimed that in this most coveted event of the Olympic Games the athletes of the United States had made a clean sweep, and great shouts arose from all parts of the stadium.

James E. Meredith, Mercersburg Academy; Melvin W. Sheppard, Irish-American Athletic Club of New York, and Ira N. Davenport, University of Chicago, finished in order, and each broke the world's record in a sensational finish of the hottest race that athletic veterans in the stadium had ever seen.

Meredith lowered the time to 1 minute 51 9-10 seconds. He continued on to the half mile, which was officially recorded at 1 minute 52½ seconds.

Melvin Sheppard, whose remarkable work at the London Olympiad, when he won the 800 meters in the record time of 1:52 1-5, caused many to make him the favorite in that event to-day, and Ira Davenport were only inches behind, their time being given as 1:52.

The American team, Courtney, Belote, Wilson, and Cooke, practically owned the 400-meter relay race, but disaster overtook them. They won the semi-final apparently with ease from the British team. Sweden beat Hungary and Germany beat Canada. The judges announced, however, that the Americans were disqualified because Wilson and Belote failed to exchange the stick until they had overrun the limit. The British team takes America's place in the final heat.

The United States failed to shine in the 10,000-meter walk, Frederick H. Keiser of the New York Athletic Club, who finished fifth in the second heat, being the only American left for the final. Four of the ten listed for the final heat are British, with the Canadian, George Goulding, who captured the first heat handily, and Norman of South Africa, who represented the Union Jack.

Training for the Marathon.

The Marathon runners are training hard for Sunday's struggle. Johnny Hayes, who won the London Marathon, and who has the Americans under his care, thinks that Kolehmainen, brother of to-day's winner of the 10,000 meters event; Corkey of Canada, and Gitsham of South Africa are the Americans' most dangerous rivals. The course is rather rough, and is laid over the hills. Hayes says that it is like American country roads, and he expects some record-smashing if the day is cool.

In the springboard diving competitions R. M. Zimmerman of Quebec won second place in his trial heat. G. W. Galdzick of the Chicago Athletic Association and Arthur McAleenan of the New York Athletic Club were third in their respective heats. All qualified for the finals.

WORLD CHAMPION AT 19 YEARS.

James Edward Meredith, the new champion at 800 meters and conqueror of the great Sheppard, former title and record holder, is the youngest foot racing athlete in the world to be in possession of such high honors as those just won. He has just turned 19 years, and was graduated from Mercersburg Academy this Spring. He entered the academy from Williamsons Trade School, near Philadelphia.

He attracted public notice this Spring at the University of Pennsylvania relay races, when as a member of the Mercersburg relay quartet his team won the preparatory school championship with Meredith running his quarter mile in 50 1-5 seconds, which was a remarkable performance because the track was ankle deep in mud.

He then began to improve in wonderful fashion, and at the Middle States interscholastic championships he broke the world's interscholastic record for a quarter mile by covering the distance in 48 4-5 seconds, and later astonished every one with a half mile in 1:56 4-5.

At the Eastern Olympic tryouts in Boston on June 8 Meredith made the mistake of running too slow a pace in the first 440 yards of the half mile, in which he was arrayed against Sheppard and Caldwell, both of whom beat him in 1:53 4-5. It was thought at the time that he should have been tried at the 400 meters distance, but Jimmy Curran, his trainer, asserted that no one could beat him at the half mile.

SANE, SAYS ALIENIST ENGAGED BY THAW

Dr. Meyer of Johns Hopkins Testifies That His Release Wouldn't Be a Public Menace.

FOUND HIS MEMORY GOOD

And the Prisoner Had the Right Answers on Politics of Champ Clark, Wilson, Underwood, and Others.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., July 8.—Dr. Adolph Meyer, Professor of Psychiatry at Johns Hopkins University, testifying as an alienist for Harry K. Thaw, the slayer of Stanford White, said on the stand at the hearing before Supreme Court Justice Keogh this afternoon that in his opinion Thaw was now sane and that his release from the Matteawan Asylum for the Criminal Insane would not be dangerous to the peace and safety of the people.

Dr. Meyer described in great detail his many conversations with and examinations of Thaw and said that he had been unable to discover any evidence of insanity. In his opinion, he said, there was no basis for the State's contention that Thaw was a dangerous paranoiac whose liberation would be detrimental to the public welfare.

Dr. Meyer was the first of the Thaw witnesses called by Clarence J. Shearn, leading counsel for Thaw, when following a brief redirect examination of Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald, of New York, ex-District Attorney Jerome, representing the State, announced that the State rested its case.

Dr. Meyer, who is a graduate of several institutions, speaks English with a most pronounced foreign accent. He testified that in his examinations of Thaw he found no evidence of mental disturbance of any kind, that with the exception of a tendency to talk rapidly Thaw's speech was perfect, that his memory was good and that he had at no time given him reason to believe that he entertained enmity against any person in the world.

Thaw Understood Politics.

Dr. Meyer said that he and Thaw had discussed politics, art, society, literature, Thaw's own condition, and scores of other subjects, and that in each and every instance he had found no evidence that Thaw was insane or had been at any time insane. In discussing politics he pointed out that Thaw had said that Champ Clark was an "all 'round Democrat," that Woodrow Wilson did not help himself when he asked for a Carnegie pension, that Theodore Roosevelt had "taken up La Follette's plan," that Oscar W. Underwood was a conservative Democrat, and that President Taft was "a good man like Platt."

Among those subpoenaed by Mr. Shearn were William M. K. Olcott of the law firm of Black, Olcott, Gruber & Bonynge, the firm that was first retained to defend Thaw, but which was soon dismissed by him; Allan Evarts, a son of the late Secretary of State Evarts, who was Stanford White's attorney; Peter B. Olney, who was a member of a commission appointed by Justice Fitzgerald to ascertain the mental condition of Thaw during the first homicide trial; Lewis L. Delafield, another former Thaw attorney; Warden Hanley of the Tombs, and others not so well known.

"You are both eloquent gentlemen, but I am sure you can write much better than you can speak," Justice Keogh remarked pleasantly. Mr. Shearn repeated that he preferred to make a speech and Mr. Jerome that he desired to submit a brief.

"I do not expect to appeal to the court's heart, but to the court's intellect," Mr. Jerome said, "and there will be no pleas in my summary as to an aged woman's tottering to her grave."

Mr. Shearn jumped to his feet and demanded that this reference to Mrs. William Thaw, the prisoner's mother, be stricken from the records. Justice Keogh thereupon forbade any further references of the sort by Mr. Jerome. In his statement filed last week with the court, when Justice Keogh was undecided as to his qualifications to conduct the hearing, Mr. Shearn stated that if the Justice postponed the hearing the disappointment might be fatal to Mrs. Thaw.

Mr. Shearn, continuing his cross-examination of Dr. MacDonald, asked the alienist a question as to what he considered Thaw's mental condition was at the age of twenty-one.

"I should say," Dr. MacDonald replied, "that Thaw was born a potential paranoiac, and that he had never reached a normal mental condition."

"Is this a case of doubtful or obscure paranoia?" Mr. Shearn asked.

"It is a case of plain paranoia," Dr. MacDonald replied.

The last question on cross-examination was as to the fees paid to Dr. MacDonald by the State. Since he was called into the case immediately following the killing of White, Dr. MacDonald said that he had been paid about $10,000.

Mr. Jerome then asked a few questions on redirect examination, in which Dr. MacDonald repeated the opinion that Thaw was insane, after which he announced that the State rested.

Mr. Shearn called Dr. Meyer. Dr. Meyer, who is a small man with a big mustache and goatee, walked briskly to the witness chair. He carried a couple of portmanteaus stuffed with evidence, his written reports of his various talks with and examination of Thaw. He said he had had twenty year's experience in observing the insane. Since October, 1908, he had made six examinations of Thaw, the first one being in the White Plains Jail on Oct. 8, 1908.

Early in the examination of the alienist several playful flies lit on the face of Dr. Meyer, but Dr. Meyer was so deeply interested in his testimony that he did not notice them.

"Pardon, me, doctor," Mr. Shearn said, good-naturedly, "but if those flies don't make you nervous, they do me, so please fan them off."

Dr. Meyer did as requested, and continued testifying. He said that Thaw had told him that while he had at times partaken of alcoholic liquors he had always made it a rule not to drink in the morning, to make up for the excesses of a previous night. Thaw said that he had never been a confirmed drinker. Referring to his relations with Evelyn Nesbit, Dr. Meyer said he mentioned the name of a man famous in the history of the United States whose relations with a woman, he said, were similar to those he had maintained with the girl who afterward became his wife.

"I asked him about the alleged hallucinations in the station house the night of the homicide," Dr. Meyer said, "and Mr. Thaw told me that some girls had been arrested and that among them was a very young girl who came in crying, and who, he said, was probably innocent."

At another time in this same talk with Thaw, Dr. Meyer said that Thaw made some remarks about Dr. Amos T. Baker, the former Assistant Superintendent at Matteawan, and had said that Dr. Baker had asserted that the girls whom Thaw alleged were ruined by Stanford White were probably for the most part women of bad reputation.

Next Dr. Meyer took up Thaw's contention that the Monk Eastman Gang had been hired to "do him up" and added that Thaw told him that on Dec. 24, 1904, a detective had located "four loafers" loitering near the stage entrance to a theatre, and that the detective's suspicions were aroused. Thaw told Dr. Meyer that one of his detectives had given him a pistol and that while he was waiting outside the theatre, "White rushed out past them."

"Did Thaw say that any one had told him that White had a pistol and was looking for him?" asked Mr. Shearn, his reference being to the events alleged to have occurred at Christmas time in 1904.

"He said that detectives had reported to him concerning the movements of the Monk Eastman Gang," Dr. Meyer replied.

"But what about White and a revolver?" asked Mr. Shearn.

"I do not remember his referring to that at that time," Dr. Meyer replied.

Dr. Meyer added that Thaw said that Roger O'Mara, former Chief of Police in Pittsburgh, and now the head of the Thaw secret service, had advised him to carry a revolver.

"Did you know that it had been asserted by Dr. MacDonald and Dr. Flint that Thaw was a paranoiac and did you have that in mind when you examined Thaw in October, 1908?" Mr. Shearn asked.

"I did," replied Dr. Meyer.

Mr. Shearn then asked Dr. Meyer to describe his second examination of Thaw in October, 1908. In doing so, Dr. Meyer said that Thaw had talked of conditions at Matteawan, of the special privileges that were accorded him when he arrived there after his commitment by Justice Dowling, and of the subsequent withdrawing of those privileges by the authorities. Thaw said that during his first ten weeks in Matteawan Dr. Lamb and Dr. Baker did not study his case, but depended on the newspapers for their information regarding him.

Thaw, Dr. Meyer added, talked at length of the mental examination made in Mr. Jerome's library by Drs. MacDonald, Flint, Mabon, and Hamilton the day after White was killed.

"Mr. Thaw told me," Dr. Meyer said, "that Dr. Hamilton's eyes wiggled and that he poked fun at the doctor."

"What characterization did Thaw make of Dr. Hamilton?" Mr. Shearn asked.

"He said that he had no confidence in Dr. Hamilton, that he did not like his looks, and in this connectiton described the wiggling of his eyes."

Thaw had talked to Dr. Meyer of his schooldays and his year and a half at Harvard. He was dismissed from Harvard, according to the story he told Dr. Meyer, for playing poker.

"After leaving Harvard, he said he studied law, but that his failure in Latin made a legal career impossible," Dr. Meyer said.

"Thaw said that in his early young manhood he was much interested in charities," Dr. Meyer continued, "and that he had thought of politics, but that at 24 years of age he was too young for politics unless he joined a gang or Good Government group. He realized he was too young, Mr. Thaw told me, to make headway, and he decided to spend his time abroad until his head became as hard as Mark Hanna's.

"I asked Mr. Thaw what his interests as a boy had been. I mentioned the subjects as they came to me. He said that in his early youth his reading was discouraged by physicians. He said that he never cared a cent for dime novels. He said that might seem improbable, but asserted that it was a fact. As a boy, he said that he did not like Homer because Achilles always got the best of Hector. He said that he found Dickens too exaggerated, although he read him.

"Regarding music he said that he always liked opera. He knew a number of composers, among them Reginald De Koven. I asked him of his interest in art, and he seemed surprised that this question had not been asked him before. He said he was very fair at drawing. He also told me that he thought he might have acquired rhetorical powers, and spoke of the time he had considered going into politics. Baseball, he liked very much, and when we talked of society he referred to intellectual rivalry, and added that in society everybody was about the same.

"He also told me when I asked him a question about politics that he had helped to re-elect Mr. Jerome District Attorney of New York."

"Did he say how he helped elect Mr. Jerome?" Mr. Shearn asked.

"No, I don't think so. His laugh at the time indicated that it was a light remark on his part."

"I asked Mr. Thaw," Dr. Meyer continued, "what the relation of Stanford White to the general problem was, and Mr. Thaw immediately replied that he had never heard of anything as bad as White, and that lawyers had told him that White was pretty much what was said about him. Mr. Thaw told me that he abhorred the idea of taking human life, and he also said that he had never considered that alcohol had anything to do with the act.

"'Stanford White had ruined my wife and other girls, and that all came up in me when I saw that fat, damnable scoundrel,'" Thaw told him, Dr. Meyer said.

"Did he say anything about it being an act of Providence?" asked Mr. Shearn.

"'I never said that in my life, poor old Evans,'" Dr. Meyer quoted Thaw as saying in reply to that question.

"In my conversation with Thaw," Dr. Meyer said, "I did not notice any dodging or halting. He always spoke promptly and clearly and without giving the slightest evidence of holding back anything. His statements were spontaneous, and did not in any way suggest a design or desire on his part to conceal anything. His whole utterance was absolutely spontaneous, frank, and open."

On the third examination, which was early in December, 1908, Dr. Meyer said Thaw complained of the unfurnished room he then occupied and of his being compelled to retire at 8 o'clock. Thaw said on that occasion that he had asked Dr. Baker for a certificate that he was sane and hat Dr. Baker had replied that it would be better for him to get a writ. At Poughkeepsie Dr. Baker, according to what Thaw told Dr. Meyer in the December examination, had committed perjury when he swore that Thaw was a paranoiac. Thaw told him, the doctor went on, that the reason he would not talk to Dr. Lamb was "because ex-Senator Spooner of Wisconsin had advised him not to."

"Did Dr. Baker ever tell you, Dr. Meyer, that he had not discovered evidence of paranoia in Thaw?" Mr. Shearn asked at this point.

"At the end of March, 1908, he told me that his observations of Thaw had not disclosed such evidence," replied Dr. Meyer. Thaw at that time had been in Matteawan only a few weeks, and Dr. Baker has testified at this hearing that it was not until just before the Poughkeepsie hearing that he became convinced that Thaw was suffering from paranoia.

Dr. Meyer described in detail the three following examinations made of Thaw last March, Dr. Charles K. Mills and Dr. Frederick Peterson also being present. He said that the physical examination on the last occasion showed a very slight tremor of the hands, an occasional twitching of the left cheek, and somewhat high pulse.

"Were those three things the only deviations from the normal you discovered?" Mr. Shearn asked.

"Yes, and they are found in ever so many normal persons," replied Dr. Meyer.

Dr. Meyer said that Thaw gave in detail the routine of the day at Matteawan, and that his answers were not only perfectly coherent but also perfectly correct, so far as he could judge. He added that when Thaw was asked what he read in Matteawan the prisoner replied that for the most part newspapers because, as Thaw put it, they took the place of friends to a degree.

In answer to one question, Thaw had referred to what he termed his efforts to "rehabilitate Evelyn Nesbit." When asked when the impulse to kill White came to him, Thaw replied that he had been told the impulse was one of about half a minute. His relations with his wife, Thaw informed the alienists, had been pleasant until 1907, when "we came to the conclusion that we had better separate." He denied that he had ever threatened to take his wife's life at Matteawan, as Mrs. Thaw has testified.

"We asked him," Dr. Meyer said, "how he could face Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw if he ever met her again and with a man. He replied that it would not affect him in the least and that if it did he would betake himself elsewhere."

Dr. Meyer said he asked Thaw what he would do if set at liberty, and this, according to the witness, was Thaw's answer:

"First, I would go to Pittsburgh and attend to some important business. Then I would bring suit for a divorce from my wife, because she has been acting very badly. She is not of the same character she was when I married her."

When he asked Thaw why he would not sue for a divorce in New York State, Thaw replied:

"Pennsylvania is better. And, besides, there would be no chance of Dr. Flint and Dr. MacDonald butting in."

The witness said he saw nothing irrational in that line of reasoning. He said the last time he saw Thaw and examined him was on June 12 last. At that time he asked Thaw what the greatest mistake he had made in his life was and Thaw answered, the witness said:

"The killing of Stanford White. But the factor over which it occurred has passed away from me, therefore I consider it of no importance."

"Now, Doctor, basing your opinion on the various examinations you have made of Thaw, his appearance in court, the documentary evidence, all the evidence that has been given with reference to his heredity, the homicide—everything, in fact—have you been able to form an opinion as to his mental condition?" Mr. Shearn asked.

"I have."

"Has he any mental disease that would make him dangerous if liberated?"

"He has not."

"Is Thaw sane or insane?"

"Thaw is sane."

"What about paranoiacs who conceal their delusions?" Mr. Shearn asked.

"I have seen several paranoiacs who concealed them, but showed they were concealing them," Dr. Meyer answered.

Dr. Meyer said that Thaw's attitude on the stand at the present hearing was not that of a paranoiac.

The hearing will be resumed at 9:15 o'clock to-morrow morning.

BRONX GIRL LURED TO DEATH, POLICE SAY

CHILD'S STORY COLLAPSES

Twelve-Year-Old Florence Molz's Fictions Made the Police Lose Two Days on False Clues.

Two men and a youth of twenty, who had been detained on suspicion of having a hand in the murder of Julia Connors, the twelve-year-old-girl who was stabbed and slashed in an empty flat at 3,968 Third Avenue, the Bronx, were honorably discharged yesterday afternoon.

The structure of falsehoods which Florence Molz, of 3,858 Third Avenue, had erected, collapsed under the persistent questioning of the police and Coroner Shongut, and in the end the twelve-year-old girl, in tears, confessed that she had not even seen Julia Connors last Saturday afternoon, when she disappeared, and that she had simply been repeating stories told by other children and to them adding fanciful details of her own.

A youth who had been "positively identified" by the Molz girl in the early afternoon as he was leaving Crotona Park as one of the two Italians she said she saw luring Julia in the lot at Fulton Avenue and 172nd Street, was not put under arrest. He was simply detained for investigation, for even the police had become skeptical of Florence Molz and the many and varied tales she had to tell.

Jefferson Kelly of 47 East 120th Street, the unfortunate piano tuner, who was arrested near where the girl's body was found because he had blood on his clothing and a cut on his chin, was released without even being questioned at the hearing. Giovanni Grisi, who keeps a coal and wood place at 3,970 Third Avenue, was the last to be released. The girl maintained almost to the last that he was the man she had seen with Julia in the cellar of the house where she was murdered.

So impressive was her story that, despite his doubts, the Coroner intended to hold the man in $1,000 bail as a material witness. Then came her declaration that she had never seen Julia, and her story of having followed her to the cellar, and the Italian, whose wife was in court, was at once released.

A Second Girl's Clothing Found.

All this followed a night and morning of feverish activity for the fifteen detectives under Capt. Price. Much time was lost, the police admit, following clues supplied by Florence Molz. It developed yesterday that one thing was puzzling the detectives who have been scouring the Bronx for the girl's assailant or assailants, and that was the discovery in the bundle of clothing belonging to Julia Connors, which was found under a rock in the lot where she was left to die, an extra article of girl's underwear of muslin and an extra pair of well worn, soiled shoes. The shoes belonged evidently to a girl about Julia Conner's age, and on the underwear and the shoes the police say there are no marks which would serve to identify their owners.

Jacob Posner of 1,724 Washington Avenue found a knife with a pointed blade about five inches long near the curb in Fulton Avenue, near 173d Street, yesterday. It was wrapped in a newspaper

The knife had no blood marks on it, and because of the nature of the wounds inflicted upon the girl there is small chance that it was the weapon with which the little girl was killed. There was also found in the cellar of the Third Avenue house a battered black derby. The front rim is broken, as if by a blow, and clinging to the inside is a single gilt paper letter "P." Even this cannot furnish much in the way of a clue, but, with the knife, it is being kept, for the detectives are not overlooking a single chance.

Coroner Shongut opened an inquest in the Bergen Building yesterday. It was there that many curious persons came to see Florence Molz, the frail, dark-haired little girl whose stories have caused two days of useless police activity.

Very glibly and with a wealth of detail she told her story, denying much that she had previously told and contradicting detectives without tremor of an eyelid as they told of things she had said and which she emphatically denied ever having said. Capt. Price branded her as "the greatest little liar he had ever met," and even her mother, who at the first upheld the truthfulness of the child, had to admit toward the last that she had been mistaken in the girl.

In the morning Florence, trailed by four detectives, had walked about Crotona Park. She suddenly grasped a detective by the arm and pointed out the youth of 20 as the "other Italian." Upon this identification he was detained, taken first to the scene of the crime and questioned, and later held in the police station.

Florence's Various Versions.

The first story she told the police was that she had been with Julia Connors in Crotona Park about 5:30 P. M. on Saturday afternoon, when an Italian, wearing a brown suit and a brown cap had met them. This man had gone off a little distance and another man, "an Italian with a gray beard down to his chest," had accosted them both. This man had offered to take them to a moving picture show. Both had refused to go. They started to walk away, the girl said, when the old man called them back and offered to show them something "real, real nice" if they would go with him. Florence said that she had seen this man grab Julia by the hand and start to drag her into the lot. Then she (Florence) became frightened and ran home.

Then she improved upon this. She said that curiosity led her to follow the man and girl. She said she saw the other man join the old man, and together they got Julia down the steps of the rear basement entrance to the Third Avenue house. Waiting for them was a third man. That was the second story.

Then this story grew, and it was she as well as Julia who went with the men. She remained in the cellar for a time and then went home. At times the child added details which showed a knowledge of things not usually known by a girl of twelve.

When halted by a question she would answer it, usually to deny having said something, and then take up her narrative in a low, even voice. Finally the inconsistencies became so great that when the girl said something about having told the story to her mother, the Coroner stopped her and sent for the mother.

Mrs. Dora Molz is a hard-working woman. She said that her daughter had upon different occasions told of being accosted by men in the park and of having seen girls flirting with young men there. Florence had told of her having been with Julia Connors and of having been approached by an old man and his companion. She, her mother said, told of having seen the old man take Julia's hand and lead her toward the lot. Florence, she said, had told her nothing of having gone to the cellar, and she was greatly surprised when she heard some of the things her daughter had said before she had been sent for.

"Is your daughter truthful?" asked Capt. Price.

"She is," Mrs. Molz said, emphatically. "She is a good, straight little girl."

"Would you be surprised to know that it was necessary to send for a physician to disprove one of the many stories that she had told?"

Mrs. Molz said that she could not believe the girl would tell untruths. She was asked to step to one side, where she could not be seen by Florence, who was then called in. She was asked to tell her story. She began glibly. This time it was the story of her following Julia and the man to the cellar and seeing the three men with Julia Connors.

"She does not mean that," broke in Mrs. Molz.

Florence made an easy correction to meet the suggested requirements of her mother, who was warned to keep quiet. Mrs. Molz had told how her daughter had come home to supper on Saturday night. Florence, galloping ahead with her story, told how she got home "long after supper." Mrs. Molz arose to protest, but a detective caught her arm.

The girl continued, and once when Capt. Price asked her if she had not told a small boy something the girl turned quickly, looked at him, and said she had said nothing of the kind. She said she had looked down and seen the men and girl together in the cellar. It was suggested that it could not be Gresi's cellar, as it could not be seen from the rear doorway. She quickly answered that she meant the cellar under the butcher shop, showing a perfect knowledge of the place.

Little Girl Breaks Down.

Her mother was by this time apparently convinced that the girl had been telling falsehoods. The youth detained was an American with no knowledge of Italian. He proved an alibi and was honorably discharged before the hearing was over. But the Italian coal and wood dealer, Florence still maintained, was waiting in the cellar for the girl and the elderly man. Capt. Price told the Coroner that he could not ask for the detention of any man upon such testimony. She insisted that the Italian suspect was the man wanted, and the Coroner said he would hold him in $1,000 bail as a material witness.

While this was going on Detective Cassassa had been quietly questioning the girl in the presence of her mother, in a corner of the big room.

"This girl now says she did not even see Julia Connors on the afternoon she disappeared," he told the Coroner.

Coroner Shongut joined the group. Little Florence began to cry. She could not say what inspired her to tell the falsehoods which sent the detectives off on half a dozen false clues. The story of the old man, she said, she had heard from a brother of Julia Connors. Mrs. Molz said that she, too, had heard of an old man who had gray whiskers and who had been annoying children in the park. Lillian Hellman, a girl who lived in the house with her, knew all about this man, she added. But Lillian, at the time she named, had long been in bed asleep.

Florence Molz was sent to the Children's Society last night, despite the tearful protests of her mother. It is probable that her case will come up for the consideration of the Children's Court on a question of proper guardianship.

Capt. Price said that while the detectives would now have to eliminate all of Florence's stories and take to new trails, he had some real developments to follow up.

The detectives spent much time yesterday in the flat where they are sure the murder was committed. Some stains on a window sill from where it was thought the child's body in the box might have been lowered, proved to be varnish stains. The dumb waiter, they saw, was the usual greasy affair, and they would not admit that there was evidence that it was by this means that the body was lowered to the basement.

"I believe this," said Capt. Price, "That little Julia Connors was lured to the place and not dragged there.

"The front entrance was the only way to the upper part of the house," he added, "that is, you can't get to the cellar through the house. There are many stories that such men might tell to lure a little girl into such a place. She was probably drugged and cut and slashed while under the influence of the drug."

Some finger marks were photographed, but it was said yesterday that they were probably not plain enough to furnish a clue.

Edward J. Connors of 3,872 Third Avenue, the father of the murdered girl, visited the flat yesterday morning. Detective Barry was on guard there, and he met the distracted father at the door and barred the way.

Julia Connors will be buried at 10 o'clock this morning from the Catholic Church of Our Lady of Victory, at 1,510 Webster Avenue. Father Kelly will sing requiem mass, and many of the children of the Holy Angels Sodality, of which Julia was a member, will attend. It was from this church that little Julia went from confession to her death. The Rev. B. F. Gallagan, the pastor, in his sermon on Sunday spoke of her death.

Priest Warns Parents.

"Why do you mothers allow your children on the streets at night with nobody to look after them?" he asked. "Let this be a warning that too much care cannot be exercised to safeguard your little ones, while roaring lions are about seeking to devour them."

Little Julia was to be one of 125 other members of the Sodality to receive communion Sunday morning. Father Gallagan told his parishioners that the would absolutely refuse to hear the confessions of children at night.

The police admit that Crotona Park has become the stamping ground of a number of undesirables, and they have heard stories of men who have approached little girls. Only a few weeks ago two small boys ran excitedly to the police substation at 174th Street and Southern Boulevard and reported that a man in a brown derby was trying to drag a little girl into a clump of bushes. The policeman hurried into the park, but the man had disappeared.

The park is very large and is poorly policed. Only two men are assigned to duty there.

KINGSTON, July 8.—Frank M. Boyce, Jr., ex-City Treasurer, whose illness has kept him away many months, was brought here this afternoon in an automobile by Sheriff Hoffman for arraignment on indictments for grand larceny, resulting from investigation of his accounts. This is the first term of court since Boyce was indicted at which his health made it possible to appear and he seemed to be a physical wheck. Through his attorney, William D. Berrenier, he pleaded not guilty and asked thirty days to prepare his case, which was granted.

IMPEACH ARCHBALD AS AN UNFIT JUDGE

Committeemen Declare He Used His High Office for Personal Profit.

HIS MORAL SENSE BLUNTED

Overweaning Desire for Gainful Bargains with Litigants—Trial by the Senate Recommended.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Articles of impeachment against Judge Robert W. Archbald of the United States Commerce Court were submitted to the House of Representatives to-day by Chairman Clayton of the Judiciary Committee, with the unanimous recommendation of the committee for their adoption by the House and presentation to the Senate, with a "demand for the conviction and removal of Judge Archbald."

There are thirteen counts in the impeachment articles upon which the case of the House will be based in the trial to be conducted by the Senate, and these are mainly focused on the culm bank transactions in which Judge Archbald figured with Edward J. Williams and others in the Scranton coal fields of Pennsylvania.

Consideration of the impeachment resolution will be asked immediately after the House meets to-morrow.

"The conduct of this Judge has been exceedingly reprehensible and in marked contrast with the high sense of judicial ethics and probity that generally characterizes the Federal Judiciary," the committee says in summing up its findings of misbehaviors in office against Judge Archbald.

His business transactions while a Judge on the bench were held to unfit him for further service on the bench, and a resolution was presented impeaching him and haling him for trial before the United States Senate.

"Your committee is of opinion that Judge Archbald's sense of moral responsibility has become deadened," said the report. "He has prostituted his high office for personal profit. He has attempted by various transactions to commercialize his potentiality as Judge. He has shown an overweaning desire to make gainful bargains with parties having cases before him or likely to have cases before him.

"To accomplish this purpose he has not hesitated to use his official power, and in such he has degraded his high office and destroyed the confidence of the public in his judicial integrity. He has forfeited the condition upon which he holds hs commisson and should be removed from office by impeachment.

"A Judge should be the personification of integrity, of honor, and of uprightness in his daily walk and conversation. He should hold his exalted office and the administration of it above the sordid desire to accumulate wealth by trading or trafficking with actual or probable litigants in his court. He should be free and unaffected by any bias born of avarice and unhampered by pecuniary or other improper obligations."

With Chairman Clayton's report was a resolution providing for the management of the trial before the Senate. The full committee designated Chairman Clayton, Representatives Floyd of Arkansas, Davis of West Virginia, and Webb of North Carolina, Democrats, and Representatives Norris, Nebraska; Sterling, Illinois, and Howland, Ohio, Republicans, managers to prosecute the Archbald trial before the Senate.

The charges against Judge Archbald set forth in the thirteen articles of impeachment range from his business transactions with actual and possible litigants in his court to a trip to Europe, which, it was charged, was given the Judge by Henry W. Cannon, a railroad magnate and financial power in New York.

Favoritism to a railroad litigant was also included in the charges, and in the thirteenth count of the indictment, under the heading 'general misbeheavior of Judge Archbald," the committee reviewed the charges and found that Judge Archbald "grossly abused the proprieties of his said office of Judge, was guilty of misbehavior and of misdeameanor in office." An epitome of the articles of impeachment follows:

Article 1—Negotiated with the Erie Railroad Company for the purchase of the Katydid Coal dump for Edward J. Williams, his business associate. In the opinion of your committee, Judge Archbald's participation in this transaction under all the circumstances was reprehensible and prejudicial to the confidence of the American people in the Federal judiciary.

Article 2—Joined with George M. Watson of Scranton, Penn., in an attempt to sell the stock of the Marian Coal Company to the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad. This company was owned by the Boland Brothers of Scranton, at that time litigants against the railroad before the Inter-State Commerce Commission. The committee charged Judge Archbald figured in the negotiations "for a valuable consideration."

Article 3—That Judge Archbald sought to lease from the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company a culm bank on the Girard estate coal property near Shenandoah, Penn. At this time the railroad was a litigant before the Commerce Court and before the Inter-State Commerce Commission. It is the conclusion of your committee that the officers of the coal company (subsidiary) relinquished the right to operate the said culm bank because of the influence exercised upon them through Judge Archbald's position as a member of the Commerce Court.

Article 4—That Judge Archbald sought additional evidence from Helm Bruce, attorney for the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, in a case before the Commerce Court which had been closed and given to the Judges for decision. Later he considered a supplemental brief from Mr. Bruce without the knowledge of the attorneys for the Inter-State Commerce Commission to meet a conclusion reached by another member of the court. Judge Archbald wrote the decision in favor of the railroad company. In the opinion of your committee, this conduct on the part of Judge Archbald was unfair and unjust to the parties defendant in this case.

Article 5—That Judge Archbald used his judicial influence to get a coal lease from the Philadelphia and Reading Coal Company for Frederick Warnke. It is charged that Warnke promised $500 to the Judge and later a note for $500 was discounted for the Judge and has not yet matured.

Article 6—That Judge Archbald used his influence to help James R. Dainty of Scranton, Penn., purchase a coal tract from the Lehigh Valley Railroad while the Lehigh had a suit before the Commerce Court. The persistency with which Judge Archbald sought these business favors of property concessions from railroad companies having litigation, or likely to have litigation, before the Commerce Court indicates a well-defined plan to use his official position and influence as a member of such court for financial gain and profit.

Article 7—That Judge Archbald figured as a signer and the payee of a note for $2,500 by W. W. Reissinger of Scranton, Penn., five days after he had adjudicated an insurance lawsuit in which Reissinger was interested and a beneficiary.

Articles 8 and 9—That Judge Archbald sent Edward J. Williams to William P. Boland to discount a note for $500 signed by John Henry Jones while the Bolands were interested in a lawsuit before him. Boland would not discount the note, which was discounted in a Scranton bank and has never been paid.

Articles 10 and 11.—That in the Spring of 1910 Judge Archbald permitted Henry W. Cannon of New York to pay his entire expenses on a pleasure trip to Europe. Mr. Cannon was at that time, and still is, a stockholder and Director in many railroads. It is claimed that Mr. Cannon is a distant relative of Judge Archbald's wife, but, however this may be, your committee regards it as improper for a Judge thus to obligate himself to an offficer of numerous corporations likely to become directly or indirectly involved in litigation before his court. For the same trip E. W. Searle, clerk of Judge Archbald's court, collected $500 from attorneys practicing at that bar.

Article 12—Appointed J. B. Woodward of Wilkesbarre, Penn., a railroad attorney, as Jury Commissioner of his court. This was calculated to bring the Federal judiciary into disrepute.

Accompanying the articles of impeachment, Chairman Clayton presented a brief to show that the actions of Judge Archbald described as "misbehavior" came within the purview of the constitutional provision for impeachment which enumerates "treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors."

A sharp difference along political lines has developed in the State over the proposed impeachment. Many Senators, including influential Republicans, favor deferring the trial until after the November elections, contending that ample time should be given to prepare for the hearing of the charges, and that many Senators are needed at home to look after their political fences.

Other Senators, among whom are Senators Simmons, Bailey, and Reed, all Democrats, urge that impeachment proceedings are of such high privilege that they should be taken up as soon as the House shall prefer the charges, irrespective of the personal comfort and convenience of Senators.

The penalty provided in successful impeachment cases is removal from office and may include a bar from ever holding any office of trust or honor again.

The Senate which tries officials impeached by the House, has been called upon to act as an impeachment court eight times in the past. One trial was of a President, Andrew Johnson, who was acquitted; another of a Cabinet officer, Secretary of War William W. Belknap, acquitted; a Senator, William Blount of Tennessee, who resigned; an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, Samuel Chase, acquitted; and four United States Judges, John Pickering, New Hampshire, removed from office; James H. Peck of Missouri, acquitted; West H. Humphreys of Tennessee, removed from office, and Charles Swayne of Florida, acquitted.

JUDGE ARCHBALD IS SILENT.

SCRANTON, Penn., July 8.—Judge Robert W. Archbald sticks to the reticence that has marked his attitude since the beginning of the House investigation, of charges against him. When seen at his residence here in Monroe Avenue to-night, he declined to make a statement.

William P. Boland, President of the Marion Coal Company and instigator of the investigation, was not surprised when he was informed to-day of the committee's action.

"I was confident from the start that my charges would be sustained," said Mr. Boland, "and to any one who heard or read the testimony the result was never in doubt. I am very sorry for Judge Archbald, very sorry, because I think he was merely the creature of designing men. But it was a case of his ruin or mine, and I was compelled to fight for my business existence.

"The effect of this exposure will be widespread, because it is the strongest argument that has been put forward in favor of the recall of Judges. I have always advocated the recall because my experience in the courts has taught me that there should be some check on Judges who owe their appointments not to the people but to crooked politicians. This investigation has shown that at least one branch of the judiciary rests upon a false bottom."

TAYLOR SALE TOTAL ALREADY $1,330,000

Dispersal of Pictures and Drawings Completed—A Reynolds Goes for Only $2,400.

ANOTHER BIG SALE FRIDAY

Thirteen Raeburns and Fine Works by Other Masters Among Paintings from Various Sources.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 8.—The sale of the pictures and drawings that belonged to the late John Edward Taylor was concluded to-day at Christie's. The dispersal of the magnificent collection of antique, mediaeval, and Renaissance art objects that was brought together by Mr. Taylor will be renewed to-morrow.

To-day's sale added $40,000 to the sum obtained last Friday for the paintings and drawings, making the total for them $517,500, or, with the art objects, $1,330,000.

A number of additional water colors by Turner were sold to-day. They were mostly slight, sketchy things, though a view of mountainous landscapes, with a town in a valley in the middle distance, was sold to Gibbs for $5,500.

"A Scene in Arran," an exquisitely finished painting by W. Dyce, R. A., showing peasant children with washing tubs playing at the edge of a stream, went a bargain, being sold to Agnew for only $1,650. Dyce is now coming more and more to be regarded as a great forerunner of the Pre-Raphaelites, though he was never connected with the famous brotherhood of which Rossetti, Millais, and Holman Hunt were the leading spirits.

A Reynolds, "Contemplation," a portrait said to be of Lady Crewe, in a yellow dress, also went cheap, being sold to Agnew for $2,400.

There is to be yet another great picture sale at Christie's on July 12, before the end of the season. Highly important pictures from various, mostly anonymous sources, are to be offered.

The recent record prices for Raeburns have caused a very flood of the Scotch masters' portraits in the salesroom, and at this sale there are to be no fewer than thirteen. Among them a superb three-quarter length, seated, of Lord Newton in Judge's robe and wig and a very attractive bust portrait of Mrs. Duncan in a black dress. These pictures, described as the "property of a gentleman," apparently belong to Ernest von Glehn. Other Raeburns are portraits of Agnes Law, in white muslin, seated in a landscape; Capt. George Maygill, in a scarlet coat with yellow lapels; Miss Macartney, (shown at the Guildhall in 1894.;) Mrs. Carter, Miss Janet Law, Kirkman Finley, Lord Rector of Glasgow University; Isabella Sinclair, (removed from Castle Hill House, Caithness,) John Wauchope, and Count Horace Saint Paul.

There are also portraits by Gainsborough, Hoppner, Romney, and Reynolds.

Among the foreign masters there is a previously unknown portrait by Rembrandt of his brother Adriaen. The features tally with the portraits at The Hague, the Hermitage in St. Petersburg, the Kaiser Friedrich Museum at Berlin, and the Jules Porges collection in Paris.

An important view on the Rhine by Salomon Van Ruysdael is signed and dated 1652. A large Rubens from the collection of Cardinal Feschi represents the Adoration of the Magi. It measures 96½ inches by 120 inches.

Portraits of a gentleman anda lady, both in rich black dresses, by Nicoias Elias, were shown at the Rembrandt tercentenary exhibition at Amsterdam in 1906, and a pair of wings of a dismembered triptych by Mabuse show St. Catherine of Alexandria and St. Barbara. There are numerous Italian and German primitives.

This will be one of the most important sales of the year, winding up a memorable season in worthy fashion.

On engaging the cab Mr. Slater told the driver to take him to the Charing Cross Hospital.

Giordano Will Come for Rehearsals of His Opera, "Mme. Sans-Gene."

PARIS, July 8.—On his arrival here from Milan to-day Giulio Gatti-Casazza confirmed the report that by an arrangement with the publishing firm of Sonzogno he had obtained for the New York Metropolitan Opera the world's premiere of Giordano's "Madame Sans-Gêne." He said, however, that the opera would not be completed for several months, and that the first performance could not be given until the season of 1913-1914. Mr. Gatti-Casazzo added that the composer would attend the rehearsals and the première.

PORTUGAL ROYALISTS ACTIVE

People Join Them at One Town and Aid in Fight Against Troops.

LISBON, July 8.—Royalist attempts to restore the Portuguese monarchy continue to be made in various parts of Portugal.

At Moreira de Rey the population has raised royal standards on the houses. The people joined the rebels in a fight against the Republican guards, in which many of each faction were killed or wounded.

An attack on Valenca do Minho by a force of Royalists led by Capt. Sepulveda, formerly aid to Queen Maria Pia, was repulsed. The Captain, thirteen other officers, and forty of the Royalist troops retreated across the international bridge over the Minho, where they fell into the arms of the Spanish troops and were arrested. Others escaped by swimming the river.

The telegraph wires have been cut between Braga and Vianna do Castello, and the Espozendo Railroad has been cut and blocked with timber at Barcellos, where martial law has been proclaimed.

A number of Royalists tried to-day to dynamite a bridge over the Minho, near the town of Caminna, but they caused only slight damage, and the train service was interrupted for but a short time.

Although many of the Royalists have been subdued or arrested, two important detachments still maintain activity. One of them is commanded by Capt. Couceiro and has headquarters near the town of Montaiegre. The men are well armed with rifles, revolvers, and knives.

A second force of Monarchists, according to the latest reports received, is marching from Verin to Chaves, in the Province of Tras-os-Montes.

The Government, which remains in session night and day, is rushing troops and war vessels to the north.

No Royalist movement has yet started in Lisbon or Oporto, but the Government, fearing an outbreak at Oporto, is concentrating a large force there, and is distributing other troops along the frontier.

The battleship Vasco da Gama, carrying troops and machine guns, and the cruisers Republica and Almirante Reis have arrived at Oporto.

It is alleged here that the Carlist leaders in Spain are secretly helping the Portuguese Royalists and that many of them are now in Portugal endeavoring to spread the Monarchist revolt.

MADRID, July 8.—Premier Canalejas stated in an interview to-day that the strictest orders had been given to prevent Portuguese conspiracies from being arranged on Spanish territory. He said that all leaders and accomplices would be arrested.

Spain is considerably incommoded by the interruption of the telegraph service owing to the Royalist uprising in Portugal, but it is believed here that the movement is of little importance and has already virtually collapsed.

Official dispatches received here from Orense and Verin, however, state that two columns, each of 300 Monarchists, were encamped last evening in the Portuguese mountains. A few skirmishing encounters between these columns and Portuguese troops and mounted police had occurred, practically without any result.

The Mayor of another town on the Portuguese frontier reports the passage there of 300 mounted Portuguese Royalists.

Niels Gron Campaigns Against Danish "Money Power," Which Obtained Concession.

FEARS GERMANY WILL GET IT

Even Japan Could Thereby Menace Our Supremacy at Panama, Says Danish-American Publicist.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 8.—Stealthy designs on American supremacy over the Panama Canal lie hidden behind recent developments in the Danish West Indies, according to Niels Gran, the Danish-American traveler and publicist.

Mr. Gron, who is visiting Berlin with his bride, formerly Mrs. Carl Stone, daughter-in-law of Mrs. H. O. Stone of Chicago, is well known in American and European political circles as the negotiator of the treaty of 1902, whereby the United States attempted to buy Denmark's colonial possessions in the West Indies.

Mr. Gron has been carrying on a vigorous public campaign throughout Denmark against the Danish "money trust" in connection with its recent acquisition of an incalculably valuable Government concession for improving and exploiting the harbor of St. Thomas, which has been called the key to the Caribbean, and which, in the opinion of many, practically dominates the eastern entrance and exit to the Panama Canal.

Although the concession is granted to a group of five Danish capitalists, Mr. Gron alleges that the holding corporation's scheme of organization will permit control to be transferred at any time to foreign purchasers.

The affiliations of the "money trust" which captured the concession are such, Mr. Gron asserts, that the danger of the control of St. Thomas Harbor falling at some time into German or even Japanese hands is and will remain a real and ever imminent one. He thinks that Germany is the most probable heir to the concession, as the Danish magnates, to whom it is granted, have the closest affiliations with highly placed personages, official and financial, in this country.

PARIS, Tuesday, July 9.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Echo de Paris reports that Prince Arthur of Connaught, only son of the Duke of Connaught, will shortly marry Princess Irene Alexandrovna, daughter of the Grand Duke Alexander Michailovitch, who is a cousin of the Czar.

It is stated that the marriage was decided upon last August. No official announcement was made then owing to the youth of the Princess, who, however, is now just about to reach her seventeenth birithday, when the betrothal will be announced.

The marriage, it is added, will be celebrated in St. Petersburg, and it is expected that King George will attend the ceremony.

INQUIRY BY MACVEAGH.

Into Charges of Department Disloyalty—Bond That Saved Secretary.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Secretary of the Treasury Franklin MacVeagh returned to Washington with President Taft to-day and reached his office at 11:30 o'clock. He took up the matter of the publicly exploited resignation of former Assistant Secretary A. Piatt Andrew at once.

It became known not long after the Secretary returned that it was his purpose to institute an investigation and learn if possible whether any of the several officials of the department named by Mr. Andrew in his letter of resignation had been consulted by Andrew and shared his feeling in regard to the Secretary's course in conducting the affairs of the department. It was said that there were two men, and possibly a third, who have indulged in comment on the affair which cannot be reconciled with the complete loyalty a subordinate should feel toward his chief. But the Secretary, it was stated, would pursue a fair course toward these men and give them every opportunity to explain their feeling.

The Secretary allowed it to be known that he had discussed the matter fully with President Taft, and it was decided to ask for Andrew's resignation before the Secretary left Washington for his Independence Day vacation. The Secretary feels vindicated in the affair, and says that he does not intend to go after any scalps in the department, but that he will not fail to discover who are his friends and who are not in his own official household.

An interesting version of Andrew's relation to the Secretary in the issue of the Panama bonds in 1910 has come out here. It is said that President Taft being somewhat disturbed by the Fall elections in 1910 on his return from Panama decided to issue the canal bonds authorized by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff act.

Mr. Taft took up the matter of a bond issue promptly on getting back to Washington and the Tuesday after his return he had two New York bankers here to consider the issue of $100,000,000 Panama bonds at 2½ per cent., with the feature of National bank circulation included. That day there was a Cabinet meeting, but the President did not consult Mr. MacVeagh, nor let him know what was going on. But the keen Assistant Secretary, Andrew, who was then attached to the Aldrich Monetary Commission, found it out and told Mr. MacVeagh.

To Mr. MacVeagh it was a decided humiliation, and seemed to make it necessary for him to resign and go back home at once. Andrew at once canvassed the leading officials of the Treasury Department, and an agreement was made that if the Secretary went out all would go. This heroic step never became necessary, the Secretary's face being saved by the intercession of Senator Aldrich, who persuaded the President to suspend the negotiations and take up the matter with Secretary MacVeagh in a manner that restored good feeling all around.

SPEAKING OF OURSELVES

We would rather lose a contract than make a promise we could not fulfil—we would rather lose money than break a promise we had made—and we would rather have an Owner's good will at the end of an operation than at the beginning, for it is a tradition that the building business offers more opportunities to disrupt good relations than to cement them.

Incidentally, it is pertinent to state that our methods beget confidence, and that the completion of every building we undertake finds the Architect and the Owner our fast friends.

BELMONT EXPLAINS HIS SUBWAY PROFIT

Answers Charges of C. H. Venner and His Continental Securities Company.

HEARING IN HIS OWN OFFICE

Transfer of 15,000 Shares of Interborough Justified, He Says, as Commission in Risky Enterprise.

With a chair in his own office at 43 Exchange Place serving as a witness stand, August Belmont told his own story of the financial launching of the Subway yesterday afternoon. This was by way of explaining the early transfer to August Belmont & Co., bankers, of 15,000 shares of Interborough capital stock, declared to be now worth in the neighborhood of $4,500,000, a transfer which has been called in question by the Continental Securities Company and Clarence H. Venner, as protesting Interborough stockholders.

Objection was taken to the transaction on the ground that it was brought about through fraud and misappropriation for the purpose of paying a bonus to Belmont & Co. Mr. Belmont's reply represents the transfer as a legitimate and even modest compensation for the tremendous role played by his company in launching the huge transit system.

The Mr. Venner who is the moving spirit of the litigation has been the moving spirit in many such legal contests, a fact which has been the subject of adverse comment by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in another case. His side of the present suit was represented at yesterday's premininary hearing by J. Aspinwall Hodge, who said that he had one-quarter of the stockholders behind him.

"I represent the loose stockholders," said Mr. Hodge.

Mr. Belmont could hardly repress a smile.

"A very good adjective to apply," he murmured, and Mr. Hodge hastened to explain that he was speaking of the untied stock, the "democratic stock."

It was in June, 1912, that the Court of Appeals, acting on a demurrer, sustained the right of the plaintiffs to begin this action against Belmont, Freedman, and others, Directors and stockholders of the Interborough, to set aside the old transfer of the 15,000 Interborough shares. Judge Chase practically summed up the complaint as an allegation of "fraud and a substantial misappropriation on 15,000 shares of the stock through a nominal purchase of property and the payment of a pretended claim for services."

The property referred to as specified in the resolution authorizing the protested transfer was the Pelham Park and City Island roads, and the services (besides the obtaining of a subscription list for the new operating company, the Interborough) were the Belmont services in procuring the assignment of the McDonald contract—that is, the assignment of the lease to the operating company—and the sale and transfer to the Interborough of the bulk of the stock of the Rapid Transit Subway Construction Company, which held in its possession the operating contract. Belmont & Co. were practically the bankers behind all the difficult steps that preceded the physical building of the city's Subway, and eventually they received the 15,000 shares of stock.

"Why, if we had charged the regular commission on all the transactions and capital involved, it would have come to more than that," said Mr. Belmont yesterday.

Mr. Hodge tried to separate the four enumerated elements in the justification of the transfer and learn just what Mr. Belmont thought each was worth, but he was unsuccessful, for there had been no differentiation at the time.

Mr. Belmont agreed that the Pelham Park and City Island roads, horse-car lines in the Bronx of intrinsic insignificance, were not, apart from the rest of the story, worth $1,500,000, the par value of the stock transferred. He said that he paid some $270,000 for them, buying through an intermediary, for, he said, if the holders had known that it was he who was acquiring them they would have charged ten times what they did.

Mr. Belmont's Explanation.

"And let me tell you, Mr. Hodge, that those roads were indispensable, and the securing of them represented an inestimable service. The obtaining of those roads alone was worth far more than the $1,500,000," said Mr. Belmont.

It was then explained that the strategic value of the seemingly unimportant lines lay in the fact that they held a perpetual franchise which could serve as the kernel of the new undertaking and on which an operating company could proceed without the enabling act then held up, apparently indefinitely, at Albany. It was intimated that when the two little lines with their franchise turned up in the hands of the people who were to launch the Interborough the opposition came lamely down off the fence, the Ethiopian came out of the wood pile, and the Legislature passed the enabling act. But the two Bronx roads were the key to the situation, and Belmont & Co. held the key.

"I could have charged anything. I charged no commission, my purpose being to ask and to receive such compensation as seemed proper under my rights with the original syndicate."

And then Mr. Belmont fished out from among his papers the original contract between his banking house and the McDonald syndicate, similar to the one between them and the stockholders of the Rapid Transit Construction Company. He read slowly the clause in that agreement, which concluded by saying:

He pointed out that those little horse car lines made it possible to raise the necessary millions by assuring an operating company.

"And without that assurance, it would have been impossible to raise a dollar," he said, and later, when Mr. Hodge seemed again inclined to question the value of the compensated services, he said:

"Those services gave the city a system of rapid transit, and it took ten years before the city was able to add to it."

A $90,000,000 Enterprise.

As connectedly as the questions permitted, Mr. Belmont ran over the early chapters of the Subway story, when John B. McDonald's bid went in, and some of the Belmont money backed it, and he told of the money that was risked in the days when bankers shied at the proposition.

"Some money went from my own pocket to give evidence of good faith. Don't think that those were easy days. The underwriting of those beginnings was no easy task. Why, it was a $90,000,000 enterprise, Mr. Hodge! I was responsible. Wouldn't you have been satisfied for me to have a 5 per cent. commission?"

"Oh, I would have been satisfied for you to have a 10 per cent. commission," said the lawyer generously, and then the hearing dissolved, to be resumed to-morrow afternoon in Mr. Hodge's cooler offices. At the hearing yesterday, Mr. Belmont was represented by De Lancey Nicoll, Joseph S. Auerbach, and Mr. Nicoll's partner, Mr. Annable. Langdon P. Marvin was the referee.

LOW PAY ENDANGERS BANK EXAMINATIONS

Paltry Fees for Inspection of Country National Banks Result in Slurring of Work.

DISHONESTY IS UNDETECTED

Bank Inspectors in Convention Discuss Their Problems—Loans on Real Estate Need Watching.

About seventy-five bank examiners, working under the Controller of the Currency, the State Banking Department, and the Clearing Houses in the larger cities, met at Brighton Beach yesterday for the first session of their annual conference, which it is expected will result in the formation of a permanent National organization. The conference, which will continue to-day, is the first that has been hold in the East, and included representatives from the reserve cities of New York, Albany, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington, and the States of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia.

After a short session in the forenoon the examiners were entertained at luncheon by their Chairman, Frank L. Norris, National Bank Examiner at Philadelphia; Edwin F. Rorebeck, who succeeded Charles A. Hanna as National Bank Examiner at New York, and State Superintendent of Banks George C. Van Tuyl, Jr.

Supt. Van Tuyl explained that the purpose of the meeting was to encourage co-operation among the State, National, and Clearing House Examiners and to exchange views and information on methods of detecting the purpose and anticipating the departure of frisky cashiers.

The subject that received the most attention in the meetings was the low rate of pay of the National Examiner working in the country, both from the standpoint of its inadequacy and from that of the corresponding menace to depositors, caused by the hurried way in which he must complete his task and get on to the next town, if he is to make enough to pay for his keep and traveling expenses. It seems that the rate of compensation was fixed in 1875 and has never been changed.

For examining a bank with less than $100,000 capital the Examiner gets $20. At least two days, it was declared yesterday, should be devoted to a thorough examination, and sometimes it is necessary to employ an assistant. All this comes out of the $20, including the assistant and his expenses. The rate advances with the size of the bank, but never gets up very high. For a bank capitalized at $100,000 to $300,000 the fee is $25; for a $300,000 bank, $35; for a $400,000 bank, $40; for a $500,000 bank, $50, and for a bank capitalized at $600,000 or over, $75.

A recent defalcation in this State was cited as an instance of what may happen under a system where the National Bank Examiner has not time and can not afford to take time to make much more than a superficial inspection. One of the officers had been robbing this bank for years, his peculations aggregating some $350,000. It had been examined by three or four different men in that time, but none of them had found anything wrong, and one of the examiners said yesterday that this affair was the worst black eye the Government examining system had received in many years.

The pay of the examiners in the reserve and central reserve cities is regarded as liberal, and is in striking contrast to that of the country examiners. The pay of the latter is fixed in the statute, but in the reserve cities discretion is given to the Controller of the Currency, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. The rules he has made are different in the various cities.

In New York the Chief Examiner gets a fee of $90 on the first $1,000,000 of capital and $10 on each additional $1,000,000, and also $10 for each $1,000,000 of gross assets. In all cases the fees are paid by the bank examined, so that a bank in this city with $25,000,000 capital and $300,000,000 of assets would pay $3,630 to the examiner, instead of the $20 the examiners gets from a small bank in the country.

The examiner in charge in this city has an annual revenue of about $50,000. Out of this he has to pay his six or seven assistants, office rent and all other expenses. This brings his own remuneration down to about $15,000 a year. Charles A. Hanna, who became Chief Examiner for the New York Clearing House, when it established its system of examinations last year, receives a salary of $20,000 a year.

The State Bank Examiners, whether working in the city or in the country, are also better paid than the country National Examiners. They get from $8 to $20 a day and their expenses, and are assured of 300 days' work in the year. Their examinations are consequently continued until they are satisfied that they know all they need to know about a bank's condition. If the country National Examiners took the same course as these per diem State men, they would sometimes find themselves without railroad fare to the next town, according to statements made by them yesterday.

In Buffalo, as they pointed out, an examiner may work on a big bank with an assistant and the most he can get is $75, out of which he has to pay the assistant, while in Albany, which is a reserve city, the examiner receives from $200 to $450 for inspecting smaller institutions.

Chairman Norris took up this subject in a paper on "National Bank Examination and the Fee System," and declared that changes in banking methods since the law of 1875 was enacted had greatly increased the work of the examiner. The scramble for deposits, he said, causes greater leniency in respect to credits, requiring closer scrutiny to prevent losses from speculative underwritings and from "that community of interest which is the parent of capital, from 'dummy' notes which are quite likely to be its offspring, and from bonds which are not founded upon intrinsic worth."

Payment of the country examiner on the same basis as in the reserve cities, Mr. Norris said, would be "a long step toward making failures and successful dishonesty a thing of the past."

Col. Ellis H. Pepper, National Examiner for Long Island; C. A. Southall of Buffalo, Mr. Rorebeck and Supt. Van Tuyl argued along the same line, and it was decided that a committee of three National Bank Examiners be appointed to drawn up resolutions asking the Controller of the Currency to use his influence to have the law changed on this point. The committee will report to-day.

"The Advantages of Having a System in Making Examinations" was the subject of a paper by Samuel M. Hann, National examiner for Baltimore and Washington. He said there was still room for improvement in making examinations.

"All examiners realize," he declared, "that so far as defalcations are concerned, the present system does not offer an absolute protection against loss. Every man who desires to rise above mediocrity should be guided by certain rules of conduct, and no examiner can be a success without a system. His examinations should proceed along logical and systematic lines; the desireratum being a maximum of efficiency at a minimum of time and labor.

"Every examiner should give the Government the best that is in him; he should have high ideals, knowing that in doing his full duty he has his own reward. He should be encouraged by the consciousness that in some measure he is protecting the weak and the innocent, and that in an age dominated largely by material conceptions of life, he often brings to naught the machinations of designing men."

There was general discussion in the afternoon of some of the difficulties met with in making examinations. D. W. Quinn told of the necessity of looking up appraisals or having appraisals made in the case of all real estate securing loans, whether in the form of mortgage or deed. A deed, he said, was nothing more nor less than a mortgage, when used to secure a loan, and it could be foreclosed by the bank, which would then find that it was subject to all liens of record in the same way as a mortgage.

Bonds of real estate corporations, he said, were met with as collateral, and they represented only equities and were in reality third mortgages in many instances. As property was sold off to pay interest on these bonds in some cases, it was easy to see what would become of their value before maturity.

Mr. Roreback said he believed farm mortgages were as good as any security a bank could get, and that much leniency had been shown in enforcing the law against them, which was passed in 1863, when real estate was at a low ebb. Every time Congress had been asked to change the law there had been objection on the part of the big city banks, and he agreed that real estate should play no part in their loans.

Recurring to the subject of appraisals, Supt. Van Tuyl said his department had a bureau for the appraisal of real estate securing loans of savings banks made without the knowledge of the bank.

"There is a disposition," he said, "on the part of up-State savings banks to make loans on New York City real estate. One reason is that the Director making the loan gets a trip to New York, is entertained at dinner and the theatre and is taken out in an automobile to look at the property. After about three days of excitement he closes the loan."

Claude Hutchins of New York brought up the point that a dishonest cashier may abstract securities attached to loans and substitute for them securities held by the bank for customers for safekeeping. The same was true to some extent, he said, of securities coming into the bank's possession through making loans for correspondent banks. He emphasized the importance of checking up both these classes of securities, although they did not enter into the condition of the bank.

Mr. Roreback said that in this city it had been the practice for several years to check up the collateral on loans made for correspondents, but it would be an almost endless job to go over "safekeeping securities." He had done it in Chicago once a year, but the task was so great here that he had not decided yet what to do about it.

Kentuckian Who Heads Voting Phalanx of 27 Again a Bridegroom.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind., July 8.—"I hope this girl will remain with me until I die," said seventy-year-old Benjamin F. Sanders of Louisville, Ky., after he was married to his sixth wife, Mrs. Mary Dixon, about the same age, yesterday afternoon.

"I have buried four as good women as ever lived. The fifth woman I took for a wife did not suit and we were divorced."

With the addition of his wife's three sons, Sanders heads a Republican voting phalanx of twenty-seven, which will be for Roosevelt if he runs; if not, for Wilson and Marshall. Sanders is a retired farmer.

Robert R. Crowell, an assistant engineer in the Topographical Bureau of Queens, who was in charge of that bureau under the administration of former Borough Presidents Bermel and Gresser, was suspended yesterday by Borough President Connolly.

The conduct of the bureau while he was in charge has been investigated, and it is understood that he will be cited to appear before Commissioner of Public Works O'Leary this week. In Gresser's term Crowell successfully fought charges filed against him and was reinstated in his position.

PUSHCART REMEDIES GO TO ALDERMEN

Committee to Draw Up a New Ordinance Will Be Named at Meeting To-day.

ONE DRAFT NOW MADE

Would Provide Licenses, Strict Inspection, and Fix Market Places for Peddlers.

A Committee on Pushcarts will be named at the meeting of the Board of Aldermen to-day to work with the Mayor's Market Commission to draw up a new ordinance regulating the pushcart trade. One draft of a legislative plan has been submitted to the Mayor by Laurence L. Driggs, a member of the Mayor's Market Commission, and Chairman of the Special Committee on Pushcarts. The main features of this plan are that it licenses pushcarts and restricts them to certain markets under a strict inspectorship.

Alderman Brush of the Public Markets' Committee and Mrs. Julian Heath, President of the Housewives' League, will to-day look over the stretch from 110th to 129th Street on Park Avenue, which is one of the spaces suggested for the use of the pushcart men. The Board of Aldermen will consider to-day the suggestion that the open space at the foot of Houston Street and the East River be used for the same purpose. These are two of the locations for pushcart markets named by Robert Gilman, head worker of the University Settlement. The feasibility of the other suggested market sites will be considered later. They are the space under the Manhattan Bridge from Henry to Monroe Street, First Avenue from Fourteenth to Third Street, and dock spaces in the Greenwich Village district.

Mr. Driggs has formed his plan from recommendations by all interested parties and from civic associations which have studied the question. The plan is still open to change, and Mr. Driggs will welcome suggestions from the public addressed to him at 135 Broadway. He outlined the pushcart situation as follows yesterday:

" have taken up the investigation of the pushcart situation at the request of Mayor Gaynor. The city officials are bombarded with complaints and recommendations from both the peddlers and citizens.

"The principal complaints are the obstruction of traffic, the insanitary condition of the food, the insanitary condition caused by refuse, the blackmail practiced against the peddlers.

"Many individuals, city officials, and civic organizations have sent in recommendations as to how this problem should be handled by the city. One wishes the system abolished, another recommends a chain of market spaces to be constructed for them. The peddlers themselves request a higher license fee to be charged and that they be protected from blackmail.

"Recommendations are now being collected from all available sources, the Commissioners of Health, of Street Cleaning, of Police, and of Fire, the University Settlement, and from organizations and individuals interested. When these have all been gathered into one hand and scrutinized and weighed, a comprehensive and sensible set of ordinances can be adopted by the Board of Aldermen.

"From data now obtained, the following remedies seem enforceable:

First—All push carts should pay a license fee of $10 a year.

Second—Licenses should all expire June 30 of each year.

Third—Each cart should have attached a license number similar to those on motor cars.

Fourth—Pushcarts should be placed in certain designated market spaces, with an official Inspector in charge of each market to enforce order and sanitary rules. All other streets should be forbidden them.

Fifth—Carts selling food should be segregated and should have license number attached in green color to attract inspection by the Board of Health.

Sixth—Penalty for violation of law should be imprisonment and forfeiture of license.

The Jewish Community (Kehillah) of New York City has taken up the suggestion of the United Hebrew Charities for the establishment of definite market places for the pushcart men. Bernard G. Richards, Executive Secretary of the Jewish Community, said yesterday:

"The pushcart peddler is the poor laborer's friend; he buys cheap and sells cheap, and in these days when living has become so high that it has become almost impossible to live, he is performing a very useful and beneficient function in bringing foodstuffs and other necessities to the people and in keeping the prices from rising beyond their means. At the same time, he has been placd in such circumstancs that he has become a nuisance. He obstructs the thoroughfares, deprives the children of the only place they may play—the sidewalk—and litters the street with all kinds of refuse which becomes a menace to the public health, and which in hot weather is especially dangerous.

"The streets of the lower east side are very poorly kept—in fact, are littered and filled with refuse of all kinds—and last Summer an effort was made on the part of a number of social and communal workers to have the streets better cared for. The Kehillah had received a number of complaints from its delegates, and in view of the fact that many of our societies are located downtown, we felt it our duty to take part in this effort. The committee waited on the Commissioner of Streets and several interviews followed, but the uniform answer received to all complaints was that the trouble with the streets was due to the pushcart peddlers, and that nothing could be done so long as they were allowed to occupy their places on the streets. Now we knew that the pushcart peddlers were greatly responsible for the bad condition of the streets, but we also knew that they had become a useful and important agency for selling foodstuffs at low prices, and we also knew that with all kinds of complaints, with grafting politicians, and persecutions from the police, the poor pushcart men were having sufficient trouble for the time, and so our crusade for cleaner streets was held in abeyance. The time has now come when a great thing ca nbe done in the interests of the public health by setting aside definite market places for the peddlers."

LAND OF HIS FATHERS NOW EUGENE PRINCE'S

Could Call No Country His Own Until the Senate Made Him an American.

GOING BACK TO RUSSIA SOON

Born There of American Parents, but Lost Citizenship Here Because Father Never Saw This Country.

Eugene Prince, who was born in Russia of old New England stock, but under conditions which left him without citizenship in either country, is awaiting the signature of President Taft to make him an American.

Mr. Prince became a man without a country through a situation which was not provided for in the laws either of Russia or the United States. His grandfather went to Russia and established himself as the representative of a large Boston firm. He retained his American citizenship, and his son, John Henry Prince, was born an American citizen, under the statute, Section 1,993, which says:

> All children heretofore born or hereafter born out of the limits and jurisdiction of the United States, whose fathers were or may be at the time of their birth citizens thereof, are declared to be citizens of the United States; but the rights of citizenship shall not descend to children whose fathers never resided in the United States.

John Henry Prince, who was born and educated in Russia, became the agent there for the Niles Tool Works and the Bethlehem Steel Works, and remained in Russia without ever visiting the United States. His son, Eugene Prince, decided, when he neared the age of 21 years, to return to the United States. It was then that he found the predicament in which he was placed by the clause of Section 1,993, which says that "the rights of citizenship shall not descend to children whose fathers never resided in the United States."

The Russian law requires that a foreigner, on leaving Russia, must obtain a permit from the Russian Government. This permit can only be issued on presentation of a passport from the Government to which the foreigner owes allegiance. The Diplomatic and Consular officers of America could not recognize Eugene Prince as an American citizen, and consequently he had no passport to present. His plans to leave for America would have been wholly blocked by the legal tangle if Ambassador Rockhill and others who interested themselves in his case had not placed the unusual circumstances before the Russian Government and obtained a special permit in the form of a letter.

Mr. Prince arrived in this country in 1911. After a visit to relatives in Wenham, Mass., he entered the Chicago offices of the International Harvester Company. He soon made a declaration of intentions to become an American citizen, if special legislation could not be obtained in his behalf. It then became apparent that the conditions under which he was born prevented him from making the declaration in conformity to law.

Not being a citizen of the United States, he could not obtain a passport back to Russia, and his most valuable accomplishments, his knowledge of Russia and of the Russian language, were, it seemed, made useless to him. The International Harvester Company desired to employ him as a Russian representative.

All this embarassment could have been avoided by him in the first place, had he sworn allegiance to the Czar, the Russian law did nat recognize him as a Russian because of his American parentage. By naturalizing himself as a Russian, however, he might have obtained a passport to America without difficulty and on arrival here could have taken out naturalization papers and placed himself under the protection of the United States Government. The notion of becoming a Russian, however, was distasteful to him and he rejected it, when it was suggested to him by American Consular officers as a solution to his problem.

His case was finally brought before Congress and on last Thursday the Senate passed a joint resolution granting him citizenship.

ANNULS REGENTS' DECREE.

Justice Gerard's Action Permits an ex-Convict to Practice Medicine.

A peculiar situation developed yesterday, when Justice Gerard granted an order annulling the revocation by the Board of Regents of the University of the State of New York of the right of Edward E. Conrad to practice medicine.

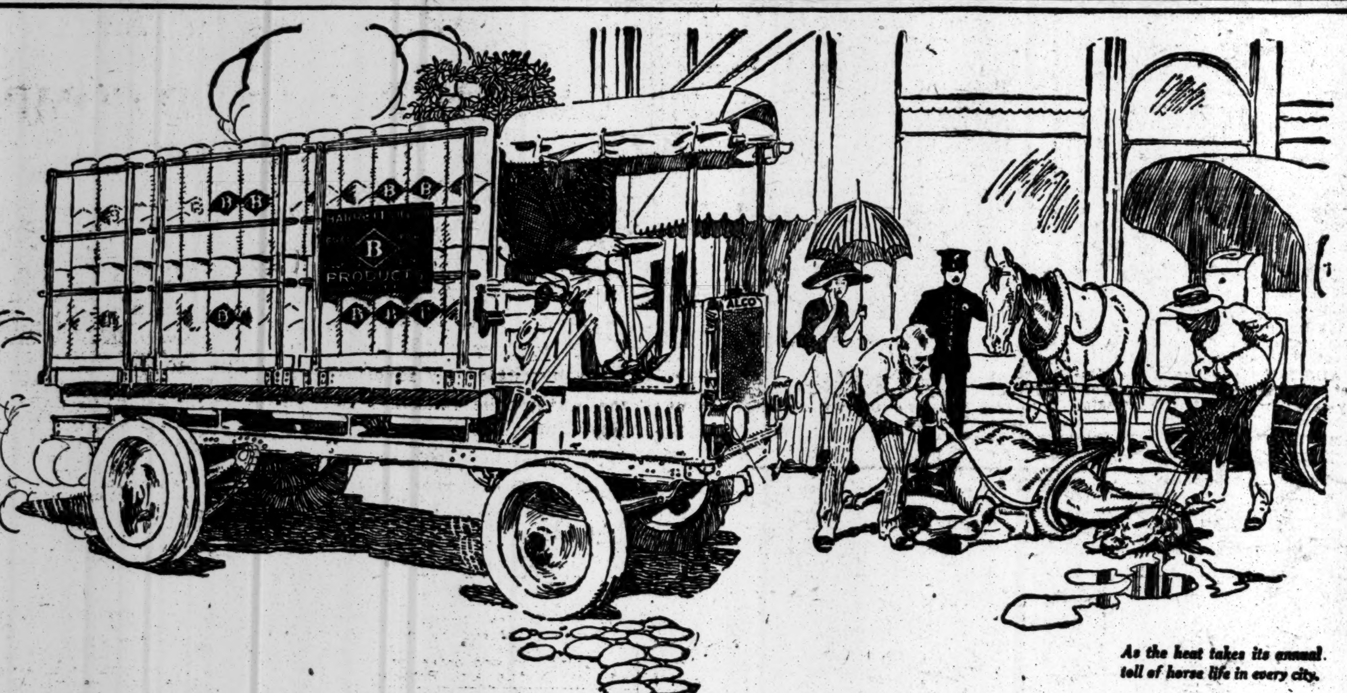
Conrad, who lived at 54 West Ninety-fourth Street, received his license to practice medicine in 1889. He was arrested on Feb. 12, 1904, and subsequently convicted on a charge that he had assisted in a criminal operation. He was sentenced to Sing Sing, but was paroled after sixteen months' imprisonment. Later he was discharged.

While in Sing Sing he made application for a pardon, which Gov. Hughes denied. Meantime his license was revoked by the State Board of Regents. In March of last year, after Conrad had been discharged, Gov. Dix, on a second application, pardoned Conrad and thus restored him to citizenship.

Asa Bird Gardiner, who represented Conrad, filed with Justice Gerard affidavits setting forth that the Board of Regents had exceeded its jurisdiction in revoking Dr. Conrad's license. He also maintained that the granting of a Governor's pardon must simultaneously reinstate the subject of the pardon to the status existing before the conviction.

Dr. Conrad, under the ruling of Justice Gerard, can now resume practice at will. It is understood, however, that the State Education Department, through Frank B. Gilbert, chief of the department's law division, will take an appeal from the order of Justice Gerard.

The case is said to be without precedent.



As the heat takes its annual toll of horse life in every city.

Horses Bend to the Heat Alco Trucks Never Falter

This is going to be a hot summer. Heat follows cold. Last winter was the coldest in years. This summer is to be the hottest. It's the swing back of the weather pendulum.

Particularly will this heat affect horses.

Ten thousand of them died in a few days from the blistering sun a year ago. In one week 1,200 alone perished in the streets of New York City—a sad sight and a serious business situation. For the money loss in five days ran over $1,000,000—due to the death of the horses, veterinary bills, and business lost through inability to execute orders.

What the loss amounted to in other parts of the heat zone can only be guessed—a gigantic sum.

There is a way to prevent this loss.

Motor trucks are not affected by the sun's rays. They travel along as fast and as smoothly on a sizzling hot day as on a cool day.

They do not bend to the weather.

They beat horses five to one on a hot day.

It is the old story over again of the Animal and the Machine. The Machine almost always wins.

Alco motor trucks have saved the lives of untold numbers of horses, have prevented the loss of thousands of dollars by delivering the goods on time—have been a Godsend to humanity and animaldom.

Alco motor trucks flourish and succeed greatest where the test is most severe. And the test is nowhere more gruelling than in the express service. For the haul is heavy and often long; the goods must be delivered on time and rush seasons are numerous.

Four express companies have over $275,000 invested in Alco trucks. The American Express Company has 41 Alcos. It has recently placed its tenth repeat order for five more. The Long Island Express Company has twenty. Ten of them were purchased on a re-order. They work eleven hours daily.

In the service of the United States Express Company an Alco truck a few months ago ran for 336 hours without the motor once stopping—two weeks of steady, night and day work.

But not alone in the express service is the value of Alco trucks measured. In almost every line of business they are performing unusual tasks and saving over their horse predecessors.

"We save over twenty cents a ton," writes the Seaconnet Coal Co. of Providence, R. I.

"Our Alco pays 16½ per cent on the investment," testifies the Los Angeles Pressed Brick Company of Los Angeles, California.

"It has replaced two two-horse teams, one one-horse team and has done away with a package car system—for less than the former cost," states the Atlanta Paper Company of Atlanta, Georgia.

"Promptness and the 'always ready' condition make the cost of delivering about one-half that of three two-horse teams," adds the Cambria Steel Company of Johnstown, Pennsylvania.

Thus the story of Alco achievement runs.

Sales of Alco motor trucks increased 152 per cent last year. Number of agencies selling Alco trucks increased 364 per cent.

The American Locomotive Company leads all other manufacturers in number of trucks being built and sold.

Sixty-two per cent of its sales are re-orders.

And a re-order means a satisfied user.

There is time to prevent the loss of your horses through death from the heat.

Before the next hot spell sets in let us demonstrate to you the superiority of a motor truck over horses on a hot day.

WHITMAN'S MEN RAID LOAN SHARK OFFICES

Eight Money Lenders Arraigned in the Tombs Court—Their Records Seized.

HELD ON A USURY CHARGE

One Victim in Three Months Paid $42.50 on a $31.50 Loan—Other Arrests Expected.

Acting under Assistant District Attorney Franklin Brooks of the Bureau for the Prosecution of Loan Sharks, thirty-six detectives raided yesterday the establishments of several downtown money lenders and arrested eight persons on the charge of obtaining usurious rates of interest. All of those arrested were arraigned before Magistrate Corrigan in the Tombs Court and held for further examination on July 11. Catherine Marshallek, an employe of D. H. Tolman of 7 East Forty-second Street, demanded a hearing and was held in $500 bail for trial in Special Sessions.

Eighteen bench warrants were signed by Magistrate Corrigan at the request of District Attorney Whitman, who appeared in court and stated that Mr. Brooks had evidence sufficient to hold every one whose name appeared on the list handed to him. The warrants were issued in record time and early in the morning the raiding party started out. Three detectives went to each of the places mentioned.

Some of the money lenders protested when the raiders appeared, but they were hustled into waiting patrol wagons and driven to the Tombs, while all their books and papers were piled in another patrol wagon. At the office of Samuel Zlott at 230 Grand Street the detectives were told that all his papers were in a safe. Undaunted by this, the raiders picked up the safe and drove off with it. They were about to do the same thing with the safe of William Greenburg of 280 Broadway, but refrained when he asserted that $40,000 worth of diamonds were locked up with the papers.

The raiders, however, met a great deal of opposition when they entered the offices of Jacob Brodie, "the king of money lenders," at 116 Nassau Street, and arrested his daughter Helen. Brodie showed fight at the outset, and when his daughter had been placed in the patrol wagon ran after it, shouting to the detectives to release her. Arriving at the Criminal Court Building he followed the raiders and their prisoners to Mr. Brooks's office and finally sprang upon Detective Reap. Detective Thomas of Mr. Whitman's staff placed Brodie under arrest for interfering with an officer, and the money lender was hustled to the Tombs prison pen and later fined $10.

His daughter was also defiant, and demanded that she be arraigned at once. When she learned that her request could not be granted she refused to give her name and address to Mr. Brooks. However, she finally consented to do so when she saw numerous other money lenders come in and willingly give their names.

Jessie O'Brien, another young woman, told the detectives that she did not want to ride in a patrol wagon, and they consented to take her to the Tombs in a surface car. Her office is at 32 Union Square, and is under the name of Ward & Co. In Mr. Brooks's office she was beginning to talk to several reporters, when a man rushed up and shouted:

"Don't talk! Don't talk!"

"Why, who are you?" demanded Miss O'Brien.

"I am your lawyer," replied the man.

An explanation was demanded, and it appeared that Miss O'Brien's employer had retained counsel to defend her.

Solomon M. Sugarman of 1,133 Broadway, the City Credit Company, was held in $1,000 bail for further hearing, as was his brother, Mark Sugarman, of the Royal Banking Company, 93 Nassau Street.

Michael Rubenstein of 309 Broadway was arrested on two warrants charging him with violation of Section 314 of the banking law, and was held in $1,000 bail for further examination.

Catherine Marshallek decided that she wanted to stand trial before the Magistrate. She was charged with lending $31.50 to Andrew Chapman of 247 West Twenty-first Street, who is employed in the wares department of the Custom House. Mr. Chapman testified that on Oct. 1 last he went to Miss Marshallek's office, at 7 East Forty-second Street, and asked to see Mr. Tolman. He was informed that Mr. Tolman was out, and the defendant asked him what she could do for him. He explained that he wanted a loan, and received $31.50. By Jan. 6 last he had paid $42.50, and was still paying. District Attorney Whitman, who conducted the examination in person, said:

"Your Honor, this case explains itself. Here this man was being charged interest at the rate of 400 per cent."

All the prisoners furnished bail, and bondsmen with big rolls of bills crowded the courtroom and made so much noise that Magistrate Corrigan was forced to ask for silence several times. After all the cases had been disposed of, a squad of workmen was pressed into service to carry the books and records taken in the raids to a vault in the Criminal Court Building.

Later Mr. Whitman explained that yesterday's proceedings were merely the beginning of the crusade he has inaugurated against money lenders. It will make no difference, he declared, how many times a person has been arrested, as he will ask that he be rearrested as soon as other complainants appear against him. Mr. Whitman also hopes that other persons who have been charged an illegal rate of interest will appear at his office and make a complaint. All complaints received by Mr. Brooks will be thoroughly investigated, and charges will be laid in every case where it is shown an illegal rate of interest has been demanded or accepted.

WILLIS B. DOWD'S ACCOUNTING

Statement That Funds Sent to Him Were Missing Incorrect.

In the issue of THE TIMES of June 5 there was a news item referring to the receipt of certain moneys by William Bruce Dowd from C. E. Quincy, Jr., and a statement to the effect that after the receipt of the check by Mr. Dowd, for investment, there had been no trace of the money, according to the allegations of the complaint. This last statement was not in accord with the facts.

The complaint in the case shows that the action is the usual one for an accounting by Mr. Dowd of the fund referred to, and the prayer for relief is, in substance, that an account be made, and the rights of the parties thereupon adjusted.

THE TIMES FOUND MUFF.

Mrs. J. Van Vechten Olcott's Dog Recovered by Advertisement.

The Lost and Found column of THE NEW YORK TIMES has again come to the rescue of a valuable little white poodle that strayed away from its home, in Seventy-second Street.

A few days before the Fourth of July Muff, the little white family pet of Mrs. J. Van Vechten Olcott of 31 West Seventy-second Street, strayed away from Mrs. Olcott's maid and was lost. On July 2 an advertisement was inserted in THE TIMES, and within a few days Muff was returned to his home, safe and sound, just as clean and fluffy as when he strayed away. Mrs. Olcott wrote THE TIMES, saying: "I cannot thank THE NEW YORK TIMES enough for what it did in securing the return of my dog."

WARSHIP IN RIGHT PLACE.

Rear Admiral Winslow Explains Anchorage of the New Hampshire.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 8. — Although neither Capt. W. B. Appleby of the Commonwealth nor any of his officers accepted the invitation of Rear Admiral Aaron Ward to testify before the Naval Inquiry Board which sat to-day by order of Rear Admiral Ward to inquire into the ramming of the battleship New Hampshire by the Fall River liner Commonwealth early yesterday morning, it developed before nightfall that there existed a decided difference of opinion as to responsibility for the collision between the naval men and the officials of the Fall River Line. In the absence of Capt. Appleby or others of the Commonwealth's officers, the Inquiry Board, under Commander U. T. Holmes of the Flagship Louisiana, concluded the investigation and its report is now in the hands of Admiral Ward.

It has not been made public, but it is assumed to clear the New Hampshire of all blame for the collision, thus sanctioning as safe and proper the location of the battleship at anchor. Rear Admiral Cameron McRae Winslow, in command of the Second Division of the fleet to which the New Hampshire belongs, issued a statement this evening assuming all responsibility for the position of the New Hampshire at the time of the collision and defending his judgment in locating the warship at her anchorage.

different tides will cover a circle with a diameter of half a mile. This being so, it is contended that at least a quarter of a mile must be allowed between the anchorage of a warship and the common course of navigation. To this argument was added a report that since the collision the New Hampshire had shifted her anchorage. The gossip drew from Admiral Winslow an indignant denial of this and this statement:

In favor of the Commonwealth the argument was advanced that a warship at anchor commonly rides a full quarter mile from her anchor, so that her swing with

"The Louisiana, Kansas, and New Hampshire were anchored on a line bearing south, southwest, one-half west, and north, northeast, one-half east, the Louisiana being the nearest to Rose Island and the New Hampshire the nearest to the bell buoy off Bishop's Rock. The ships were anchored with 500 yards distance from centre to centre of the ships, giving 350 yards of clear water between any two. This line of anchorage was laid down on the chart with a view to the least interference with merchant shipping. There is a mile of water between the New Hampshire and Gould Island for the passage of tows and other shipping bound for Providence and Fall River. The New Hampshire is anchored to the westward of the course of vessels bound from the inner harbor of Newport to Wickford, Fall River, and Providence.

"At the time the New Hampshire was run into by the Commonwealth there were more than 400 yards interval from the New Hampshire to the bell buoy off Bishop's Rock. As the distance from Gull Rock Lighthouse, at the northern entrance to Newport Harbor, to the bell buoy off Bishop's Rock is only one statute mile, it would appear hardly necessary to lay a course 400 yards outside the bell buoy for a run of only one statute mile.

"I therefore consider that the position of the New Hampshire as anchored gave ample room for the steamers passing up through this passage, and, furthermore, I doubt if the ships of the second division could be anchored on a line which would interfere less with the mercantile shipping of Newport and Narragansett Bay than on the line on which they are at present anchored.

TARIFF FOR REVENUE.

It is plainly the hope of the strict Republican organs to rouse the workingmen against Gov. WILSON by the argument that the reduction of tariff rates to a revenue basis will check manufactures and lessen the demand for labor. At the same time they are appealing to the capitalist class on the argument that cutting the tariff will diminish revenue, and the income tax will inevitably be resorted to to meet the deficit.

The two arguments do not "hitch" very well, but they are not supposed to be addressed to the same classes, and each class is expected to confine its attention to its own interests. So far as the workingmen are concerned, there is not the slightest reason for apprehension. The duties needed for revenue will be quite large enough to prevent a sudden and disturbing reduction of wages. Judiciously adjusted, these duties will aid rather than check manufacture. Their reduction will give lower cost for raw materials and for the vast variety of products which are partly manufactured, but serve as materials for other industries. In this particular department the manufactures of the United States are in a backward, inefficient condition, due to the interference of tariff duties with the whole process of production.

With arbitrary high cost of materials due to the tariff reduced, the industries of the United States will have opened to them wider markets and will be placed on a more stable footing, to the direct and indirect advantage of the workingmen. Another matter of importance is the effect of foreign competition, under greater freedom of access to foreign markets, in "keying up" the energy and enterprise of our manufacturers. At present, with the home market secured, our manufacturers are unquestionably not doing all that they can for the development of their resources. If any one doubts it, let him read the temperate, acute, and convincing statements of Congressman REDFIELD, himself a successful manufacturer. Put to their trumps by rational and just revision and reduction, easily possible within the limits of revenue requirement, they would win added prosperity and create added demand for labor.

As for the income tax, that is a pretty remote issue to influence this election.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

The sympathy of civilians is easily secured by Major W. H. HART in his article on "The Blight of Favoritism," published in The Journal of the Military Service Institute, and summarized in THE SUNDAY TIMES. It clearly reveals a state of feeling which has been known to exist in our army because of the rapid advancement of a few officers to high rank, within a few years, at the expense, as it seems, of many who know they have served faithfully.

"Favoritism" is a hateful word. Under a republican form of government the thing it stands for should not exist. Major HART points out that from the rank of Second Lieutenant to the rank of Colonel promotions in the United States Army are generally made grade by grade. The maximum pay of a Colonel is $5,000 a year while in active service, and after retirement $3,750. This is not large, but it is larger than many professional men of good attainments can ever hope to earn, and it is provision for life. A Major General's salary is only $8,000, and a Brigadier General's $6,000. The Colonel is not so badly off, in a purely material sense.

The complaint of Major HART, pretty generally supported by his fellow-officers of the line, is that in these times of peace certain officers have been advanced to the higher positions over the heads of older officers, and the inference is that favoritism was the cause of their advancement. These officers, so far as the public knows, and they are generally in the bright light of publicity, have proved equal to the new burdens placed upon them. In times of war promotions to high rank without regard to grade are inevitable. Nevertheless, they frequently cause jealousy. It is quite conceivable that promotions without regard to grade may frequently be essential to the good of the force in times of peace. If such promotions are due to favoritism they are always objectionable. So far as possible, the whole country approves of promotions in the army grade by grade.

But even if wrong has been done in the few cases now uppermost in the public mind, it is obvious that the wrong to the army and to the country attempted in the Army bill the President recently vetoed was far greater. Major HART's article seems to be a contribution to the general discussion caused by the attempt of the Military Committees of Congress to tack personal legislation on an appropriation bill. That is not a fair way or an honest way to meet the issue Major HART raises, and it is not one which will receive the approval of the country.

THE CAMORRA VERDICT.

Italy has been vindicated by the verdict in the Camorra trial. The world's apprehension that justice would be defeated has been proved groundless. The trial has dragged along for two years, its developments have been startling, much of the procedure has been amazing, at times it has seemed that the caged Camorrists were the prosecutors and the advocates and jurors the culprits. But the conditions have all been extraordinary, because a system and a tradition as well as a crew of murderers were on trial. Moreover it is doubtful if other nations, especially the United States, are justified in ridiculing Italian methods of procedure in criminal cases.

Justice has triumphed, and the doubt that Judges and jurors would dare to inflict the law's penalty upon members of a powerful society of criminals has been removed. All of the prisoners have been found guilty of belonging to a criminal association, nine of them have been convicted of the murder of CUOCOLO and his wife. Three hundred policemen and a military force guarded the Viterbo court when the verdict was rendered, and order was maintained in spite of the persistent audacity of the caged criminals and the obvious sympathy for them among the spectators. Thus, probably, the history of one of Italy's most dangerous organized conspiracies is closed, with a wholesome warning to the others to disband and reform.

POOR OLD ENGLAND.

When things began to go badly with the Mistress of the Seven Seas the blame was put on the flanneled fools at the wicket. They played not wisely but too well, as ALEXANDER or somebody said to the heir apparent who played the flute too well, in consideration of the effort spent on such results. But now English sportsmen are ridding themselves of all such reproaches. An American has taken even the championship of their golf from them, although it has since been recaptured. On Saturday England demeaned itself to take the French golf championship, as one who should take candy from a baby. That is all that England has to boast of in these days of overflowing sorrows.

A mere colonial yesterday took the lawn tennis championship away from the British holder, GORE. And in the contests of the world's best players at all games England does not even get a place. The world's records are falling to the American boys above all others, their total points yesterday being 25 to England's none, and 17 for all the rest of the world, with other possibilities of winning lying ahead within apparent easy reach. They little know of England who only England know, and the fact must be bearing itself in upon the British intelligence that something really is the matter with Englishmen, since they no longer are masters of the playground. The saying that Waterloo was won on the Eton playing fields, once a boast, is now a bitter prophecy. In the words of the Prince of WALES, now King, "Wake up, England!"

THE DELAYS IN CONGRESS.

If the members of Congress are suffering from the heat of Washington in midsummer and dismayed by the prospect of continued suffering, it is their own fault. The session has been crowded with important business, undoubtedly, but it could all have been finished by July 1, or earlier, if there had been less futile and ill-advised juggling with the appropriation bills. The bill for the army went to the President burdened with an impossible "rider," providing for a far-reaching plan of army reorganization which should never have been tacked on to an appropriation bill, and further complicated by purely personal legislation which disregarded the authority of the Executive. Since the President's veto the House has passed the Army bill again in its original form, and much delay in conference is inevitable. The Legislative, Executive and Judicial bill, which is also disfigured with "riders," including the abolition of the Commerce Court, is still before the conference committee. A veto is inevitable, unless the bill is further amended.

The Sundry Civil bill has passed the House with an objectionable "rider" repealing the Tarnsey act of 1893, under which the architectural merit of our public buildings has been greatly improved and their cost decreased. It has not yet been taken up by the Senate. Such legislation should not be permitted to go through hastily. Further delays are inevitable, and Congress is likely to sit until September unless a sensible agreement can be reached on matters so important. The Naval bill is now a subject of joint conference, and the efforts of the upholders of false economy will from now on be devoted to preventing the building of more than one new warship this year. Two should be built every year. This is not a question of party politics. The growth of the navy should not be retarded for the sake of political effect.

The report of the House Committee in the case of Judge ARCHBALD yesterday, recommending his removal by impeachment, advances one matter which has been delaying the proceedings, and the case of Mr. LORIMER of Illinois will probably be settled in the Senate this week. But unless wiser counsels prevail to induce the majority to remove the "riders" from the appropriation bills, the Nation's legislators will be kept at work through the hottest part of the year in one of the hottest cities of the country. There is pressing political business for most of them at home, too.

ANYBODY TO BLAME?

New York's fatal pier accident is small compared with the one in the Niagara River when twoscore people were killed, but the general facts were alike. In both cases too many people trusted themselves upon structures too weak to support them, and the deaths followed naturally. The Buffalo District Attorney said nobody was to blame, because he could find no statute making it anybody's duty to inspect such death traps and certify their safety. It is little to the purpose to say that there ought to be such a statute. It is rather to be hoped that our local authorities may find somebody to blame, perhaps by resorting to laws which are not the less laws because not statutes. There must be precedents placing responsibility upon those who invite unsuspecting persons into places of danger, and make a profit from what may prove to be blood-money even without intention of causing death.

It is not vindictive to pursue such offenders. It is a mere measure of protection of others from similar risks by arousing a sense of caution among those who feel that others, not themselves, are responsible for their safety. The similar incident at Arverne illustrates the peculiar dangers of the Summertime pleasurer. Happily, nobody was hurt on the boardwalk, but there easily might have been if only from panic. In many similar cases structures originally none too strong are neglected through the Winter, and at the beginning of the holiday season excessive strains are put upon them. Those who venture do not think of what they are doing, but perhaps they, too, are culpable, although risking only their own lives. If not in these cases, certainly in many, it is plain that the crowds are dangerous in themselves, apart from the weakness of the structures beneath them.

But impatience to "catch a boat" overcomes prudence, and then there is a hurried search for somebody to punish. It is the least that can be done. Prevention is better than cure, and each acting for himself can help to make his life safer by not unnecessarily contributing to the crowds which are the cause of the collapses of temporary erections on which they would not venture if fully visible, but whose flimsy character is hidden by water.

MILK AND EGGS.

We note with surprise that the summary of issues contained in the call for the third party contains only the remotest reference to the burning issue of the cost of milk and eggs which Mr. ROOSEVELT announced with such emphasis on Friday last. The explanation, we suppose, is that the champion has not yet completed that "exhausting study" of the subject which he regards as necessary before appealing to the country. Mr. ROOSEVELT is nothing if not deliberate. It will be recalled that the next latest product of his brain in the way of issues, the recall of judicial decisions on constitutional questions, was not given to the public for at least a week after he had expressed some interest in it in one of his contributed "editorials." Other statesmen may rush in where angels fear to tread, but the ex-President will not commit himself to radical changes in the system of American Government without at least seven days of reflection or one of reflection and six of composition.

The painstaking investigation of the subject of milk and eggs demands special attention because neither of the great parties and neither of the candidates has taken a definite stand regarding it. If Gov. WILSON or Mr. TAFT had asserted that milk was too pure and too cheap and eggs too fresh and not sufficiently costly, it would be open to Mr. ROOSEVELT to denounce them as willful falsifiers, diluters of dairy products and robbers of hens' nests. But in the absence of this convenient opportunity Mr. ROOSEVELT must take time to present his issue in all its real importance and its essential, though somewhat obscured, novelty. The rumor that Senator DIXON has sniffed at the issue, that Mr. PERKINS regards it as too cheap for the occasion, and that Mr. MUNSEY does not see how it can be made exciting enough for the purposes of a whirlwind campaign, is, we believe, without foundation in fact. When Mr. ROOSEVELT has found leisure to think for a few consecutive hours on this matter, he will spring it on an eager people and keep at it until something more fantastic shall engage his fertile mind.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER.

England is entertaining the Dominion Premier upon his arrival for consultation regarding Canada's contribution to the defense of the empire. It remains to be seen whether these hospitalities are premature, since BORDEN is for a "great navy" only upon terms, and in that resembles his predecessor. LAURIER's requirement was that only Canada could authorize the use of Canada's navy by vote of Parliament. BORDEN's position is not more acceptable to England. BORDEN demands nothing less than the admission of Canada to the imperial council, wherein questions of peace and war are settled.

Both these positions have an immediate interest for the United States, since Canada never can be a party to a transatlantic war, or any other war for that matter, without our great concern. The position of both LAURIER and BORDEN is that Canada shall stand aloof from the vortex of European politics, and shall not become a belligerent without her consent. But this leaves out of the question the other party to the war. England's colonies will be the first objective in case of hostilities, as Spain's were our first objective. If now England for the sake of strengthening her navy shall admit her colonies to the imperial councils there can be no pretense that they are not parties to the war. And whether or not such a pretense is set up the question will be settled not by England or her colonies but by the other belligerent for himself.

If England has found her concentration for home defense necessitated abandoning her Mediterranean interests, or intrusting them to France, how much more unable will she be to defend Canada or Australasia, and how impossible will it be for them to defend themselves. Canada's navy must remain a jest until long after any hypothetical hostilities now under the consideration of those who delight in rumors of war, and England's defense of Canada is absurd at the time when she is counting the last shots in her locker for home defense.

Nevertheless Canada is not derelict or defenseless so long as she has an "adjunct" committed to her defense for reasons of self-interest. It is contrary to our National interests and firm policy that any foreign nation should gain a foothold on our continent—or this continent, if "our" continent offends any susceptibilities. Not out of consideration of either England or Canada would the United States forbid the conquest of Canada. But not until the United States should be subdued would it be possible to establish militarism on American soil. Our primary and selfish interests are stronger than any alliance, either political or commercial, with either Canada or England. The idea that Canada can or should defend herself, or that she should be conquered, is as absurd as that her Government should be absorbed in ours.

There never can be either one or three flags flying over the North American continent. Always there must be two, for the reasons stated by Secretary KNOX, in the presence of President TAFT and Senator ROOT, and quoted by Dr. MACDONALD of Toronto in these words in the course of his address to the conference of American and Canadian students at Northfield, Mass., in June. Quoting Secretary KNOX's words Dr. MACDONALD said:

> If there were no Canada on this continent vitally related within the British Empire it would be to the interest of the United States that one should be created. For to-day the power of America is the power of the United States and the power of Canada plus the power of Britain. Were Canada separated from Britain, either as a wholly independent sovereignty or as States in the American Republic, there would be no plus.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

No Plague Epidemic Can Come. With the bubonic plague certainly present in ports in constant communication with many of ours and as close to them as San Juan and Havana, there is good reason for regarding the situation as serious in the sense of demanding the immediate taking of precautionary measures of the most careful and energetic kind. There is, however, no excuse for panic.

The chances that the disease will gain entrance here are few, while the probability that even if it did gain a slight foothold the result would be an epidemic of any considerable proportions can be regarded as negligible.

That the plague can commit frightful ravages in climates much like ours has been proved again and again all over Europe, but it was in another age, when the very rudiments of sanitation and of preventive medicine were either unknown or frowned upon as opposition to the divine will and therefore impious. In recent years it has caused large mortality or for long periods resisted efforts to suppress it only in countries that are now in sanitary matters where mediaeval Europe was when the "black death" depopulated great cities and made deserts of whole regions. Such wholesale slaughters as that are now impossible, even in China and India, but in countries more advanced, though the advancement is not very far, the ordinary customs of civilized life prevent the plague from affecting the death rate to any appreciable extent.

In the United States persistence and extension of the plague are possible only when false conceptions of self-interest lead, as they did in San Francisco, to adoption of the policy of denial and concealment. That criminal mistake will not be made there again, and it is unthinkable along the Atlantic Coast. The plague is a disease thoroughly understood so far as concerns its nature, origin, and method of propagation. Cure for it there is none, as yet, but it can be prevented or suppressed wherever intelligent health officials have the power that goes with public confidence. That we are hearing much about the few cases in the West Indies is a reassuring fact, not an alarming one.

Discretion Carried Very Far. Gov. FOSS of Massachusetts continues to make frequent use of his pardoning power. In the course of his first year in office he let out seventy-seven convicts, and already in the second he has set free fifty-five. That is a good many, especially as the beneficiaries of his leniency include several first-degree murderers whose death sentences had been commuted to life imprisonment and a larger number for whose homicidal acts the nominally lighter penalty had been adjudged sufficient by the courts.

The Governor's theory seems to be that after a man has been long in prison no ends of justice are served by keeping him there. This is a purely personal view, defensible by many arguments, no doubt, but it is not yet the view of the law, which by fair assumption is that of the lawmaking part of the general public, and there is at least a question whether a Governor has a moral right to grant pardons for any other reason than that the law has made a mistake—has done, that is, something it did not intend to do.

Of course the exercise of discretionary powers cannot be clearly or definitely limited, and there is no pretense that Gov. FOSS has exceeded his technical authority in the granting of pardons, but a charge that he is misusing it might be maintained. When he releases a man because he knows or strongly believes the man to be innocent, or to be undergoing a sentence heavier than the law allots for the crime committed—that is an act beyond criticism, the performance of an official duty. When he does it because he personally does not believe in capital punishment or imprisonment for life—that is a wholly different matter. To his opinion he has the best of rights, and complete is his right to exert whatever influence and eloquence he possesses for getting the law changed to harmonize with his judgment. His right in effect to repeal the law is more than dubious, and that, unless the Massachusetts courts are strangely fallible, is what he is doing.

That Gov. FOSS can be stern and unyielding on occasion we know from his refusal to save the life of RICHESON, in whose behalf many and earnest pleas were made. In that case a colorable excuse would not have been hard to find, had he been looking for one. There was almost as much of general surprise as of general satisfaction that for once "the pardoning Governor" refused even to commute the sentence of a man who, whether insane or not, certainly was abnormal to an extent that brought him close to, if not within, not a few expert definitions of insanity.

Peruvian Rubber Scandals. With the Congo atrocities duplicated around the headwaters of the Amazon, the business of collecting "wild" rubber is likely to get a bad name wherever it is carried on. Even the cultivated rubber may be viewed with suspicion, since it, too, is very largely a product of "native" labor, done under but little supervision except from those whose immediate interest lies in ruthlessly exploiting their workers. Indeed, not a few scandals of this sort have already come from the rubber plantations on this continent as well as in the East.

Of course there is nothing demoralizing in rubber itself, however it may be, by common report, as regards that noble but now obsolescent animal, the horse. The familiar troubles arise, doubtless, from the fact that the men sent to control the gathering or the growing of rubber have to be marked by qualities among which delicacy and sensitiveness are apt to be missing. They find themselves alone, in most uncomfortable conditions, and with much authority over tribes so utterly alien in everything that makes for social amenities that in their often recurring moments of irritation the remembrance that their workers are human beings is lost. Not a few explorers of "dark" lands have suffered from this form of amnesia and more of them have been charged with it.

This, however, is not an excuse for cruelty to black savages or red or yellow ones, but it is an explanation, so far as it goes, why men who seemed much like other men while among their own kind have seemingly lost all regard for human life when they have been long buried in tropical jungles. Their usual defense of homicide is that it was a case of kill or be killed, but that plea hardly applies when only the making of big and quick profits is concerned.

It is no wonder, though, that the English are worried by the dreadful stories from Peru, for none has expressed more horror than they about like atrocities in French, German, and Portuguese possessions.

FARRAGUT'S SAILOR POSE

Mark of Saint-Gaudens's Genius, and Not an Error.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reply to the criticism of Stanford White on the pose of Saint-Gaudens's statue of Farragut, mentioned in the magazine article in THE TIMES, "you have made Farragut toe in like yourself," in support of the theory under discussion between them that artists unconsciously reproduce in their subjects something of their own physical defects, I will say of the statue mentioned that the sculptor posed his statue as all sailors of necessity stand on ships at sea, body resting squarely on both legs, feet spread apart, heels braced firmly a little outward, and toes turned in a little. This is the only position possible in standing on the deck of a ship in a rolling sea.

For a man not a sailor to have posed this statue with such fidelity to the conditions suggested is evidence of close observation and careful study of the habits of the profession of his subject and could not have been the result of unconscious reproduction of physical defects in the artist.

Having had two years' sea service in the navy, the sailor pose of the statue of Farragut attracted me at once and the easy naturalness of the realistic pose of the famous Admiral is one of the great merits of this masterpiece giving it its sea atmosphere and delightfully breezy sea flavor. GEORGE E. BISSELL.

Mount Vernon, N. Y., July 8, 1912.

FOR SOCIALISTS.

"You are a Socialist—and why?" I asked John Jones one day.
"I'll tell you frankly, friend," he said;
  "I want to get more pay."
I asked Sam Smith the self-same thing;
  his motive he confessed—
"I have to work too hard," he said; "I want to get more rest."

And thus it is, I've always found, with each and every one:
They want to get more property; they want to get more fun;
They want to get more luxuries, more pleasures, and more ease,
With no more toil than plucking fruit
  from off convenient trees.

To bring the golden age, is this the right way to begin?
You cannot draw more water from a tank than you pour in;
With any social system, men must work
  if they would live;
You who would get and get and get, pray tell, what would you GIVE?

R. H. TITHERINGTON.

SEE A CHANCE FOR TAFT IN THREE-CORNERED FIGHT

Democrats Among Those Who Believe He Will Win—Underwood to Stump for Wilson.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Strange to say, Mr. Taft is still running for President, and, stranger still, he actually thinks that he will be elected. To-day he has been in conference behind closed doors with the men who are to manage his campaign, none of whom appears to be the least affected by any of the prophecies of failure that have been made by the spokesman of the Cowboy Crowd.

The feeling for Taft is not by any means confined to the faithful of his own party. There are many who have been so much impressed by his determination to stand by the Constitution and the law that they have a profound respect for him and his good intentions. Said one of the greatest lawyers in Washington this morning, a Democrat from his cradle up, a Southerner of Southerners:

"I was never so near being a Republican as I am to-day, and if I had the casting ballot in the Presidential election this year, I think I should cast it for Mr. Taft."

This morning a veteran newspaper man of the Republican persuasion, who has been watching the political cat for many years and through many heated campaigns, said:

"If Mr. Roosevelt will keep his little one-ring circus going, it will mean that you Democrats will be badly beaten in November. Some Republicans will go with the Colonel and some Democrats, but more Democrats will vote for Taft than will go for Roosevelt, so that after all the straight Republican Party would in fact be greatly benefited by Roosevelt staying in the fight."

Most people here do not think that there is any fight left in Roosevelt. He has not been carrying himself like a fighter since the steam roller ran over him and all his allies at Chicago. A fairly safe prediction is that he will not be heard of within the next two months as any sort of factor in the campaign. However that may be, the members of the sub-committee of the National Republican machine, who have been eating and drinking and talking with the President the larger part of the day and night, though wearing an anxious and somewhat faded look, stoutly maintain in public that the regulars will prevail.

Shrewd observers on the outside do not think so. Underwood does not think so. He said this morning that he had not the least doubt of Dr. Wilson's election. He believes that any candidate named by the Democrats this year could be elected. He will do all he can to help elect Wilson, and will go into the campaign this year as he has gone into every campaign since he entered politics, to win for the Democratic Party. He believes that the Democratic Party is the party of the people, the party of the Constitution, and without the least feeling, except the feeling of a natural and altogether honorable disappointment that he failed to obtain the nomination for himself, he will give Wilson the same loyal support he would have expected from Wilson had the cards been dealt the other way.

He is the same self-respecting and compelling man to-day that he was before the convention at Baltimore, and has been in the management of the large affairs intrusted to him in the floor leadership of the House. He made a high, clean contest for the nomination and failed, and there his fight ended so far as the party is concerned. He is a Democrat still, and when the call is made upon him for his services on the stump or in council he will respond.

All this he has told Gov. Wilson, in effect, but it was pleasant to hear it from his own lips. All over the country there are Democrats who say flatly that Underwood was the best man before the convention at Baltimore, and he is young yet, and there are other Presidential elections to be held after Wilson has served his term in the White House.

It was said to-day that during the convention many overtures were made to the Underwood people by those in charge of the contests of other candidates for President. They were told that he could be named for Vice President on this ticket or that if his supporters would only throw their ballots to this or that man; that he could have anything he wanted in the way of patronage or position if his friends would shift from his support to other men; but they were not there to trade, and turned down every proposition, Underwood's fight being a fight for the party and not for himself, a fight for the restoration of the South to its natural and proper place in the affairs of the Nation, and, having proved that the South does not wear horns on her head or hoofs on her feet, he was quite content to have the convention determine for itself, and without any bargaining on his part or by his friends in his behalf, who should be the leader in the great struggle this year.

"I am a Democrat," said Mr. Underwood to-day, "and I go with my party. I shall give my most loyal support to Gov. Wilson. I shall take the stump for him if it is desired that I shall do so. I believe that he will be elected, and I shall help to elect him."

Underwood talks like a man. He has not sulked a minute in his tent, and is going on with his work in the House just as if nothing had happened. If there has been any break between himself and Speaker Clark, as one of the newspaper stories has it, he doesn't know anything about it and is not responsible for it. He has his work and the Speaker has his, and they have been pulling together admirably in legislation, as they will doubtless continue to pull together to the end.

Speaker Clark is far harder to get at than Mr. Underwood. He is wofully lacking in the suaviter in modo. He offends people who see him for the first time and do not understand his ways and the plainness of his speech; but he means well. All his friends say as much for him. He would make no further statement to-day. He had said all he wished to say. Of course, he would support the Democratic ticket. He had never voted any other. He had made a statement in The Washington Post Sunday, which was chiefly intended for his people in Missouri. He was trying to get them together. Missouri is a close State. Roosevelt carried it by 25,000 and Taft carried it by 629. He wanted to get his people to compose their differences, to pull with the party and for the success of the party's ticket, as he would do himself; and then he went back to his place at the Speaker's stand, where he has been doing good work, excusing his opera bouffe vote in favor of the Sherwood pension steal, and where he will continue to do good work if he shall be re-elected to Congress, of which there appears to be little doubt.

Underwood's campaign was managed by Senator Bankhead of Alabama, and wonderfully well managed. It was pitched on a high plane and was kept there. When the Senator saw that the contest was futile at Baltimore, he made a strong, manly, thrilling speech releasing the delegates who had been loyally supporting Underwood, to vote for whom they pleased, and explained that Underwood's chief purpose in going into the contest was to re-establish the South in the National life, to break down the walls that have so long divided the country on sectional lines, and, having accomplished this purpose, he felt that the end had been reached and the seed planted which would in time yield its increase.

In his opinion, three causes contributed to the defeat of Mr. Underwood—the control of at least a third of the convention by Mr. Bryan, who does not like Underwood; the lingering disposition in the minds of some of the unreconstructed that a Southern man was not now available for the Presidency, and Underwood's vote against the pension steal.

Last Friday, Senator Bankhead wrote to Gov. Wilson congratulating him on his nomination, assuring him of his most earnest support and predicting victory for the Democratic arms. To-day he received a most cordial reply from Gov. Wilson saying:

"I need not tell you what pleasure your letter of yesterday has given me. I of course knew your quality all along and was sure of your support from the moment the battle was over. But it is none the less delightful to have your generous intentions expressed with such delightful heartiness, and I thank you with all my heart. We must all get together to plan the fight."

Bankhead left Washington to-day for his home in Alabama, to "res'" up, taking a shotgun with him as he told Underwood, to keep off the newspapers and anybody who wants to talk politics to him. He will fish and fish and think and think about how to make the election of Wilson as unanimous as it could well be in a big country like this.

Nobody knows how long Congress will be in session. Former Speaker Cannon said to-day that it would probably be here for a month or two. Underwood hopes that adjournment can be reached by the first of August.

Hal Flood of Virginia, who told Mr. Bryan what he thought of him and his insolence when he tried to drive New York and Virginia out of the convention at Baltimore, says there was a great deal of trading or attempts at trading while the voting was in progress. All sorts of promises of place or patronage were made if the votes of certain States would go the way the traders wished. Senator Martin of Virginia, was assured what would be done for him and his people if the Virginia delegation would throw their support to this or that man; but he would have nothing to do with any such plans. The traders will doubtless have much difficulty in carrying out their promises, because after the 4th of March next there will be a new boss in the White House. It is one of the strongest things that can be said for Gov. Wilson—he has grown fat fighting the bosses. J. C. H.

GENIUS NOT DISEASE.

A Reply to Dr. Morris's Microbe Theory of Greatness.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While the statements you publish to-day upon the responsibility of Dr. R. T. Morris may be attractive to those so overfond of sensation as to obscure their judgment of cause and effect, yet on the analytical stage they fall apart as quickly as a Japanese parasol in a rainstorm, with perhaps a similar result—a few streaks of lurid coloring spouting from a central stick. Is it the old effort of the stolid commonplace to explain every departure from its rut as due to evil influences, or simply the failure to understand anything else?

In regard to the specific statements made let me particularize:

That any of the men mentioned who died more than fifty years ago, were afflicted as charged is more easy to affirm than to deny, as there is hardly enough reliable historic evidence in any of their cases to guide a patent medicine man who prescribes by mail in the selection of his appropriate specific.

But now for the bacteria whose effects, as they are known at the present time, are involved, and from daily experience are, therefore, more subject to elucidation. As to the production of the pessimistic philosophy by the poison elaborated by the colon bacillus, the common inhabitant of the intestinal tract of all animals, I hardly think that Carlyles and Schopenhauers are frequent enough among that class—the sedentarians—all of whom suffer from this bugbear of our old friend Elie Metchnikoff, to justify a conclusion based on such rare association. In fact, if the latter is correct, Dr. Morris is a modern, though very unpoetical Gray who in such a graveyard (our intestinal contents) has discovered so many unsung philosophers.

In order to explain his idea of the action of bacterial toxins, Dr. Morris makes unfortunate choice of the effects of alcohol, stating that it stimulates the brain cells to greater activity; yes, but as drowning influences a man's untrained-to-swim arms and legs, all to no purpose or to greater confusion.

It is known among physiologists that of all the artificial stimulants to brain activity, alcohol most surely lowers what may be called the idea inventive faculty. As to its having from time immemorial been a point d'appui for "weary geniuses," I challenge evidence that would tend to show that even some of the mediocre products that pass for masterpieces were evolved under its influences or with its aid. All who have been credited with alcoholism were necessarily periodics, as chronic regular consumers never draw such attention to their failing, and, therefore, had interregnums of non-alcoholic brain activity.

As to the time-honored superstition that the tubercular are unusually cheerful, let us consider that as a rule they rarely suffer pain and for long periods are able to follow their usual pursuits and pleasures, and then, fortunately for us all, the mind is unable to severely suffer from apprehension alone, else we would soon become actual martyrs to the dread which a reasoning being would be presumed to feel of his approaching dissolution—even a condemned criminal cannot suffer much from this cause owing to this materialism of the mind.

According to all physiologic and pathologic evidence any bacterial disease deteriorates and hampers the brain, which works best with the most normal, qualitatively and quantitatively, blood supply, so that the presumption with regard to any of the cases cited Stevenson's, for instance, is most unreasonable. The disease, tuberculosis, is noted for its periods of activity and temporary arrest, the last often enduring for months and years. During the former the sufferer is incapacitated in exactly the same way and to an extent dependent upon its degree as in a case of pneumonia or typhoid, so that there is no more reason to expect mental stimulus from one than the other, while during the period of quiescence, when there is no evidence of the existence of toxins in the blood, the oats of the racehorse are the oats of the cob.

The doctor has chosen individuals as exemplars of his theory, some of whom suffered from disease developed after the special activities which have drawn upon them—in some cases it is hard to realize why—the appellative, genius.

If such were the nectar and ambrosia of the Muses, a governmental culture and inoculation station should at once be established as an aid to us ordinary folk who are compelled to acquire knowledge by the hardest drudgery.

As to the fear expressed of mental contamination of youth by the so-called bacteria poisoned products, I think that the majority are safe behind an effective quarantine, possibly too lasting for their good.

Truly, Dr. Morris must be a very healthy personage—at least entirely immune to germ disease—yet if he would read Poe's tale, "Titbottom's Spectacles" he might really find lenses, though not those of the microscope, to show the source of true decadency.

HORACE GREELEY, M. D.

Brooklyn, July 7, 1912.

R. HARDING DAVIS WEDS BESSIE M'COY

BEFORE GREENWICH JUDGE

Bridegroom Celebrates Event by Giving 500 East Side Mothers and Children Coney Island Outing.

Richard Harding Davis, the author, and Miss Bessie McCoy, the actress, were married yesterday morning at Greenwich, Conn., by Judge William C. Rungee. Miss McCoy arrived by train from New York, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Russell Colt, (Ethel Barrymore,) Mr. and Mrs. George G. Colter, Miss Norma Winslow, Mrs. H. S. Northrup, and Miss Louise Fray.

Mr. Davis drove from his farm at Mount Kisco and was waiting for Miss McCoy at the station. With him were his brother, Charles Belmont Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Gouverneur Morris, and Stuart Benson.

The marriage ceremony was performed in the law offices of Judge Rungee in the Hackett Building. Charles Belmont Davis acted as best man, and the witnesses to sign the register were Mrs. Colt and Gouverneur Morris.

After the ceremony the wedding party motored to the country place of Mr. and Mrs. Morris, at Bedford Village, where the wedding breakfast was held.

Mr. Davis celebrated his wedding to Miss McCoy by giving 500 east side mothers and children an outing at the Sea Breeze Pavilion at Coney Island, thus recalling his own story of "Van Bibber and the Swan Boats." Mr. Davis went to the office of the Society for Improving the Condition of the Poor on Saturday and said to Mr. Capes, the Secretary:

"I'm going to marry Miss Bessie McCoy on Monday, and I want you to get up a wedding party for us."

Then Mr. Davis explained that he wanted the poor to benefit by his wedding and asked Mr. Capes to arrange a special outing for them. Mr. Capes engaged the Iron Steamboat Company to take the party of 500 to th eisland and mothers and children left at 9:45 A. M. yesterday from the steamboat pier at the Battery. The regular party of 300 little ones who are sent each week to the Sea Breeze Home for a week's outing left via the Twenty-third Street Ferry yesterday also. They will remain until the end of the week. The Bessie McCoy party, as Mr. Capes named it, will return on an Iron Steamboat Company's steamer this evening.

MRS. BRAKER WEDS TO-DAY.

Widow and Wm. L. Lower Obtain License Without Announcement.

Mrs. Katherine Gelshenen Braker, who resides at the Plaza, and William Lavery Lower of 31 West Forty-fourth Street will be married early this morning at St. Patrick's Cathedral and will sail immediately afterward for Europe on the Kronprinzessin Cecilie. No announcement of Mrs. Braker's engagement had been made, and the first intimation that many of her friends had of her intended mariage was when she visited the City Hall yesterday with Mr. Lower and obtained a license.

Mrs. Braker is the daughter of the late James P. Dunn, and she has been twice a widow. Her first husband was William H. Gelshenen, at one time President of the Garfield National Bank. Her second marriage took place about five years ago when she became the wife of Henry J. Braker, who died in 1908 in a hospital at Plymouth, England, from pneumonia which he had contracted on board the steamer while on his way to Europe.

One of her daughters, Miss R. Corinne Gelshenen, was married to Charles D. Rafferty of Pittsburgh in St. Patrick's Cathedral on June 15.

Mr. Lower is a real estate broker, forty-six years old, and this will be his first marriage. In obtaining the marriage license Mrs. Braker gave her age as forty-nine.

HELL-FIRE IDEA REPUDIATED.

Bible Students' Association Assails Old Theory and Starts Crusade.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—By unanimous action to-day, the International Bible Students' Association adopted a resolution unreservedly repudiating as thoroughly unscriptural the teaching of a place, state or condition of "hell-fire and brimstone" for the torment of the wicked.

At the same time the 4,000 delegates in the convention resolved that the vast majority of ministers of all Protestant denominations of the United States have privately repudiated the "hell-fire" theory, but for supposedly good reasons had hesitated fully to inform their congregations. It was the sense of the convention that on this account thousands, and perhaps tens of thousands, were being driven into skepticism and infidelity.

The convention appealed to every minister in the United States to publish in his local newspaper, over his signature, a statement declaring whether he believed the Bible taught the doctrine of a literal "hell-fire," and every newspaper editor was requested to invite the ministers of his locality to avail themselves of his newspaper's columns for that purpose.

The "hell-fire" question was brought up by Brig. Gen. William P. Hall, U. S. A., who requested the association to repudiate the doctrine. There was an animated discussion before the resolution, presented by Dr. L. L. Smith of Louisville, Ky., was adopted.

H. C. PIERCE LOSES APPEAL.

Judgment for $171,000 by Default Sustained by Supreme Court.

Supreme Court Justice Brady denied the motion yesterday of Henry Clay Pierce to reopen the default and judgment taken against him by Alice C. Roycroft. Mrs. Roycroft sued the St. Louis oil magnate to recover $171,000, which she alleged was due her for stock placed in trust with the defendant.

Counsel for Mr. Pierce explained, when the case came to trial, that his client was too ill to appear; it was argued by Mrs. Roycroft's attorney that the defendant simply preferred to remain in Palm Beach.

In sealing the judgment for $171,000 and refusing the stay of execution, which was served on Mr. Pierce on board his yacht, Justice Brady said: "After full consideration I cannot conclude that the defendant in this action has satisfactorily explained his default."

WEEK'S BILLS AT THEATRES.

Molly McIntyre, who has just returned from a long season on tour playing Bunty in "Bunty Pulls the Strings" with the Western company, last night made her first New York appearance in the role at the Comedy Theatre. Miss McIntyre is temporarily replacing Molly Pearson, who is away on a vacation.

Mabel Taliaferro and company in a playlet called "The Return of Ton San" and Marceline, the Hippodrome clown, were the features of the bill at the New Brighton Theatre this week.

Bert Green has been installed at Hammerstein's at the piano, to take the place of the orchestra, which has disappeared from that theatre. Harry Houdini, the handcuff king, continues to mystify his audiences. Gertrude Van Dyke, the girl who sang last week in Times Square while seated on her broncho, is another feature. Joe Jackson and the Texas Tommies remain and Little Billy is an added feature.

Hal Davis and company in "The Money Getters" and Bothwell Browne head this week's vaudeville bill at the Palisades Amusement Park.

At the Union Square Theatre Stella Mayhew and J. C. Nugent in a comedy called "The Regular," and Les Copeland are the features of this week's bill.

HER BACKERS FIGHT ON

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 8.—A bitter fight is being waged in the ranks of delegates to the convention of the National Education Association, now in session in this city, over the candidacy of Miss Grace C. Strachan, District Superintendent of Schools in New York, for the Presidency of the association. It is charged to-night that political and business forces, both in New York and in this city, have been enlisted in the campaign.

Miss Strachan is a candidate on a platform based on the needs of the women members of the association. According to reports circulated among the delegates this evening, members of an educational book combination recently visited Mayor Gaynor of New York and requested him to exert his influence in behalf of Miss Strachan and, if necessary, to pull certain political wires to bring about the result. What the Mayor's reply was is not stated, but it is stated that he did write to Mayor Harrison of this city in behalf of Miss Strachan.

Mayor Harrison, it is said, directed Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, Superintendent of Schools here, to dictate the "proper voting policy" to her "Chicago cohorts." If these refused to be tractable, then Mrs. Young, the present President of the association, was to take the floor and in a rousing speech nominate Miss Strachan. Unfortunately, Mrs. Young refused to heed the mandate, for to-day she went to Miss Strachan and asked her to withdraw from the race for Presidency in favor of Edwin T. Fairchild of Kansas. The New York delegates resented the suggestion and redoubled their campaign efforts, big streamers bearing the candidate's name being distributed broadcast.

Mayor Harrison to-night admitted that he had received a letter from Mayor Gaynor bearing on Miss Strachan's candidacy for the Presidency of the association, but declared that it was more in the nature of a letter of introduction than anything else. He declined to discuss the rumors of political interference.

Miss Strachan's candidacy has been weakened because of the talk of political interference and the support of a book trust. To-night the opinion is expressed that Mr. Fairchild, who is Superintendent of Instruction in the State of Kansas, will be the successful candidate.

Mr. Fairchild said to-night that should he be chosen to the Presidency, one of the features of his administration would be a more general adoption of a uniform system of textbooks now in use in his own State. As to the election he said:

"The matter is a delicate one for me to discuss, but I feel that Miss Strachan is being made a candidate more as a representative of her sex than as an individual. I do not believe that this election should have such a basis."

The Strachan forces were indignant at the midnight caucus last night, which named Supt. Fairchild as a candidate of "the Progressives of eighteen States." Those who took part in the caucus declared that the Strachan supporters had been invited to take part in the caucus if they would agree to abide by the vote there and withdraw their candidate if the majority voted for some one else. They further averred that the Strachan supporters refused to enter into any such agreement.

Promoters of Miss Strachan's candidacy had a different story to offer. They declare they had agreed to take part in a caucus arranged to be held last night at the Chicago Principals' Club. They went there in good faith, they said, and were confronted by a closed door, on which was pinned the notice: "Caucus abandoned by mutual consent."

They woke up this morning, they declared, to learn that the same people whom they had agreed to meet had held another caucus at a place other than that announced without notifying them of the change.

Reports submitted to the association said that of the 20,000,000 public school pupils in the United States, 12,000,000 were being educated in rural schools and that only one-third of the country boys and girls were making a satisfactory showing. Thomas H. Harris, State Superintendent of Schools of Baton Rouge, La., declared the condition of the rural schools was becoming so deplorable it was time for the Federal Government to provide both money and methods to remedy the situation.

Other speakers at the opening session were Jacques W. Redway, Mount Vernon, N. Y., who traced the history of the organization; Thomas W. Bicknell, Providence, R. I.; James M. Greenwood, Superintendent of Schools, Kansas City, Mo.; Ellen C. Sabin, President of Milwaukee-Downer College, Milwaukee, and Carroll G. Pearse, President of the association.

Charges that Irwin Shepard of Winona, Minn., Secretary of the association, was not conducting his proceedings in accordance with the by-laws brought forth sensational incidents before the Board of Directors just before the association opened its convention. Mrs. Young declared that if Mr. Shepard's annual report was adopted "all the teachers in Chicago would be justified in bringing suit for slander against the association."

The portion of the report she referred to charged "stuffing" of the enrollment at the convention in Boston two years ago, when Mrs. Young was chosen President. Mr. Shepard replied to the criticisms from President Carroll G. Pearse and others that he had been attempting merely to weed out "fake" members. Mr. Shepard then explained he had been trying to administer the by-law so as to eliminate all but bona fide members. He charged that heretofore, by paying $2, members had been enrolled to vote at a single meeting.

SUE ON TAXIMETER LEASE.

American Company Would Prevent Use of Foreign Type.

The American Taximeter Company, through its attorney, Saul S. Myers, sought an injunction from Justice Gavegan yesterday restraining the Circle Taxicab Company from using a foreign make of taximeter. Mr. Myers argued that the contract by which the Circle Taxicab Company leased taximeters from the American Taximeter Company forbade the use of any other type of distance-measuring machine.

On several of the taxicabs of the Circle Taxicab Company there have been installed taximeters of a French patent, leased from the International Taximeter Company of America, which is headed by Jacob A. Cantor, ex-Borough President. Mr. Myers, for the American Taximeter Company, asked that the contract be enforced by injunction forcing the taxicab concern to quit using the French invention. Ex-Borough President Cantor, himself the attorney for the defendants, argued that such an injunction would give the American Taximeter Company a monopoly of the taximeter business in this country.

SHERIFF SERVES EX-SHERIFF.

Harburger Hands a Summons to Shea, Who Drops In for Visit.

Sheriff Julius Harburger served a summons on ex-Sheriff John S. Shea at the Sheriff's offices yesterday.

Mr. Shea dropped in for a chat at Mr. Harburger's private desk and as he sat down the Sheriff handed him a sheet of paper.

"What do you think of that?" he asked. Mr. Shea took the familiar looking document.

"So this is the way you treat your friends, is it?" he said.

The paper was a summons in a suit brought against Mr. Shea by Antonio and Philip Musica for $728. These damages were claimed for the release on allegedly insufficient bail of a prisoner against who the Musicas had a judgment for the same amount. This alleged negligence on the part of Mr. Shea took place on his last day of office.

Mr. Harburger calmly made out and signed the affidavit of service and gave it to a clerk to file.

MRS. SAGE AIDS SWEEPERS.

Sends $5,000 to Commissioner Edwards for Pension Fund.

Mrs. Russell Sage has sent $5,000 to the pension fund of the Street Cleaning Department. In acquainting the Mayor with this fact Street Cleaning Commissioner Edwards wrote yesterday of the appreciation with which the gift had been received by the members of the Department and added:

"Thanks to you the Department of Street Cleaning employes are enjoying the benefits of a pension fund, and I hope that other people will follow Mrs. Sage's example and contribute to the cause which means so much to the men whose best years have been given to the service of cleaning the streets. Lives will be lengthened, homes made brighter and general conditions in the Department of Street Cleaning will be bettered through the establishment of this fund."

Mrs. Sage's contribution will reduce the amount to be paid out of taxation to increase the assessment the street cleaners are required by law to make to the pension fund.

ACCIDENTS ON THE FOURTH.

67 Less Ambulance Calls Than Last Year and Near the Normal Number.

The success of the safe and sane idea in the celebration of this year's Fourth of July was shown by the great decrease in the number of ambulance calls last Thursday compared with previous Independence Days. In a letter to Robert Adamson, Secretary of Mayor Gaynor, Dr. D. C. Potter, Director of the Board of Ambulance, pointed out yesterday that the calls this year were 67 less than the calls on July 4, 1911, and their total, 277, is only 16 more than the daily average for the city for every day of the year.

Dr. Potter gives this list of calls:

	July 4, 1911.	July 4, 1912.
Manhattan	196	130
Bronx	21	19
Brooklyn	105	111
Total	344	277

Death of a Christian Scientist's Child Under Investigation.

Coroner Iles is investigating the death of thirteen-year-old Helen Esther Whipple, daughter of Manager Clayton J. Whipple of the American Multigraph Company, whose home is at 50 Fanshaw Avenue, Yonkers. The girl died of scarlet fever and had no medical aid, according to her father, who is a believer in Christian Science. Dr. David John was called to the house on Saturday before the girl died, but it was only to make a diagnosis, "and," Mr. Whipple said, "to comply with the law."

The girl was taken sick last Wednesday. Instead of summoning a physician, a practitioner of the faith, Mrs. L. Y. Whitney of 15 Stanley Place was called in. Mrs. Whitney said this was the first case she had lost in Yonkers and that while she never had treated scarlet fever before, there were other practitioners whose treatment of the disease had been successful.

Mr. Whipple has been a Christian Scientist for twenty years. He said that he called a doctor to his house for the first time in many years on Saturday and that his three children previously had recovered under Christian Science treatment from all the complaints common to childhood. The death of his daughter has not shaken his faith in Cristian Science.

Mrs. Wm. H. Albro Dead at 90 Years

Mrs. William H. Albro, who was born in White Plains in 1822, died there on Sunday at her home, 133 North Broadway. She was the widow of William H. Albro, who half a century ago, established the firs tbank in White Plains, the Central Bank of Westchester County, and was its President until the time of his death. Mrs. Albro was the mother of Mrs. John Storms, Miss Georgia Albro, and Stephen V. Albro. A month ago she celebrated her 90th birthday.

Thousands of
IN THE
Must Get Relief from THE STIFLING HEAT.

Many appeals for fresh air relief are received by us every day.

If you have returned from your Summer rest, you appreciate the benefits of a vacation. If you have not, you still realize its necessity for the over-worked and under-rested.

WILL YOU NOT HELP THEM?

Think of the suffering in the tenements these hot days. It will make you happy to know that some poor family is enjoying the ocean or country breezes, or is receiving relief through you.

Here are a few possibilities:

$2.50 will keep a teething baby as your guest at the seashore or in the country for a week. Twice that amount will give the baby's worn-out mother a rest, too.

$5.00 will pay a week's board on a farm for a boy or girl who cannot continue work without a rest and change of air.

$10.00 will pay a week's board for a tired mother and delicate baby on a desirable farm, or it will make a family of four happy for a week at Sea Breeze, and strong for many months, possibly years.

$20.00 will keep a mother and three children, or two "cash girls" (sisters) at Sea Breeze for two weeks of fun and unaccustomed joy.

$100.00 will send fifteen hard working girls to the country, or ten mothers and thirty children to Sea Breeze for a week.

BARRETT BROWNING DIES AT ASOLO, ITALY

LINGUIST AT EIGHT YEARS

Bought the Palazzo Rezzonico, Where His Father Died—Estranged from Wife, Who Was Fannie Coddington.

Robert Wiedemann Barrett Browning, the only son of Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett Browning, died yesterday in Italy, at Asolo, on the land that the Brownings won permission from the Town Council to buy on the very day that the poet died—Asolo, where Robert Browning planned to build Pippa's Tower for his dwelling place, and where his son has since perfected an industrial school as a memorial to his poet mother.

Barrett Browning, as he was called, was born in 1849. Visitors to the Browning household in Italy seldom failed to mention their ethereal-looking child. Bayard Taylor wrote: "Their child, a blue eyed, golden haired boy of two years old, stammered Italian sentences only; he knew nothing yet of his native tongue. He has since exhibited a remarkable genius for music and drawing, a fortunate circumstance, for inherited genius is always fresher and more vigorous when it seeks a new form of expression." In a letter to Leigh Hunt Mrs. Browning herself wrote: "You are aware that that child, I am more proud of than twenty 'Auroras,' even after Leigh Hunt has praised them. He is 8 years old, but reads English, Italian, French, German, and plays the piano—then is the sweetest child."

This boy was Browning's anchor when the mother died, and the two of them lived in England and journeyed about Europe with Browning's sister, Sariana. When Elizabeth Barrett Browning died, the Florentines asked that the boy be educated in Italian, and he prepared for a career in their own country. This offer was declined and at length Barrett Browning adopted art as his profession. He studied for some time in Atnwerp, and at the Royal Academy, in 1878, he exhibited for the first time in 1878 a piece of his work, "A Worker in Brass." The painting attracted much attention, partly, of course, on account of the story behind its authorship, but also because it promised a successful future for the artist.

Though the offer of the Florentines was declined, the son of the Brownings returned to Italy to make his home. It was he who bought the Palazzo Rezzonico in Venice where, in Dec. 12, 1889, Robert Browning died. It had been a dream of the poet's life to possess a dwelling, however, small, in some beautiful spot which should place him beyond the necessity of constantly seeking a new Summer resort. He was fascinated by the idea of buying a certain piece of ground at Asolo, and with his son to complete the shell of a house that was to be christened Pippa's Tower. It was evident, he said in one of his letters, that for his few remaining years, his Summer wanderings must always end in Venice. After limitless red tape, there was a favorable vote from the members of the municipality, but the night on which it was taken was the night the poet died. Barrett Browning met with subsequent opposition in higher councils, but this was overcome and the hallowed land became his. It was there that he died yesterday.

On Oct. 4, 1887, Barrett Browning was married to Miss Fannie Coddington of New York, to whom he had been strongly attracted when he was a young man and she little more than a child. Miss Coddington was from an old New York family, and was possessed of a large fortune. Reports that have crossed the Atlantic from time to time in the last quarter of a century have suggested that the marriage was far from equaling in serene happiness the marriage of Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett. On one occasion, in the '90s, they separated for five or six years, and only three years ago they were again estranged. It was said yesterday that Mrs. Browning and her sister were in Europe.

Report had it that the first separation was prompted by Mrs. Browning's disapproval of a young Italian girl who was a model for her artist husband. At all events, she departed from the famed splendor of the Palazzo Rezzonico, and he took refuge with his aunt at Asolo, his retreat in troubled times always, even after the reconciliation.

HUGH J. CHISHOLM DIES.

Hugh J. Chisholm, a pioneer in the wood-pulp business and former President of the International Paper Company and President of the Oxford Paper Company, died at his home, 813 Fifth Avenue, yesterday, in his sixty-fifth year.

Mr. Chisholm was born in Niagara-on-the-Lake, Canada, and began his career at the age of 13 as a newsboy on the Grand Trunk Railway. Within a short time he had control of the news business of the entire road. Then, with his accrued capital, he went into the wood-pulp business, and there, as the years went on, he also got the upper hand. Among his early successful enterprises were the formation of the Otis Falls Pulp Company and the Rumford Falls Pulp Company. In the neighborhood of one of his plants, at Strathglass Park, near Portland, Me., Mr. Chisholm established a community of model homes for his employes.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 8.—Rube Marquard's winning streak was smashed by the Cubs this afternoon, after the great southpaw had annexed nineteen successive victories. The score was 7 to 2, and the Chicago win was due to the timely hitting of the locals, together with their knack of taking advantage of every slip of the visitors.

Rube pitched better ball than the score indicates, although the Cubs scored six of their tallies during the six innings that he was on the mound. The Giants had an off day in the field, booting the pellet around four times, and in addition pulling a "bonhead" play which paved the way for the first Cub counter.

While the home boys were touching up the offerings of the eleven-thousand-dollar pitcher, the New Yorkers were having considerable difficulty in locating the slants served by Jimmy Lavender, who before the Giants had scored their first run had pitched thirty-six consecutive innings of shutout ball. Lavender yielded only five hits, but had trouble finding the pan in the early frames. But he steadied down every time a couple of Giants were on the runways, being assisted by some wonderful support. The Cubs played errorless ball, and in the pinches came through with the marvelous efforts which were needed to check the visitors.

In the third inning Schulte cut down Merkle at the plate with a perfect throw when Fred tried to count on Murray's long single. Archer and Tinker broke up an attempted double steal by Becker and Merkle in the fifth inning by clever headwork and accurate throwing which nipped Merkle at the plate again.

The Cubs were the first to score, getting two runs in the second inning, when Zimmerman and Leach singled at the start. Saier then hit to Groh, who would have started an easy double play by tossing to Fletcher, but Hank tried to touch Leach as he ran past him and then hurled to Merkle. Tommy upset the dope by turning back toward first, and the move surprised Groh so much that he clung to the ball until too late to get Zimmerman, who had moved around from second on the play. This stupid move on the part of Groh filled the sacks, with none out, but Marquard promptly fanned the three following batters, although a wild pitch while the third man was at the bat allowed another run to cross.

Lavender walked the first man up in the first two frames, and in the second inning also hit a man after one was down, but in both instances pitched himself out of danger. He started the third by hitting Snodgrass. Becker came through with a single, sending Fred to third. Merkle then hit a hard grounder through the box, which Lavender knocked down after a hard try, and succeeded in running down Snodgrass. This play was a life-saver, as Murray came through with a hit to right, and Becker scored.

The Cubs' two runs in the fourth were made without a hit. A pass, two errors, and two sacrifices were all that was necessary.

Devore batted for Marquard in the seventh, and the crowd yelled in glee at the announcement, for it meant that the Cubs had driven the southpaw from the slab.

Josh fanned, but Snodgrass, Becker, and Merkle singled in succession, the first named counting. At this juncture the Becker-Merkle attempted double steal was queered, and Schulte made a good catch off Murray's bat.

The Giants failed to hit safely in any round except in the ones in which they counted. In the last four innings Lavender retired the side in order and fanned five.

The Cubs got their final runs off Marquard in the sixth on Saier's single, Evers's triple, and Lavender's Texas Leaguer, which Snodgrass kicked against the bleachers and then threw over Meyers's head.

Tesreau succeeded Marquard in the seventh and Wilson displaced Meyers, but the Cubs nicked this new battery for their seventh run on Saier's double, a sacrifice, and a single.

International League Correction.

President Edward Barrow of the International League pointed out last night that a mistake had been widely made in the recording of the eleven-inning game with which Montreal and Rochester concluded a double-header at Rochester last Saturday. The score should be recorded as 6 to 5 in favor of Montreal, instead of 7 to 6 in favor of Rochester. The error caused some confusion in the standing of the teams, which may now be corrected accordingly.

INDEPENDENCE CUPS POLO.

Great Neck Second and Bryn Mawr Second Victors at Cedarhurst.

Two games of polo were played yesterday on the grounds of the Rockaway Hunt Club at Cedarhurst in the second series for the Independence Cups, the first resulting in a victory for the Great Neck second team over the Meadow Brook second by the net score of 7¾ to 4¾ goals. The second game was between the Bryn Mawr second of Philadelphia and the Piping Rock Wanderers, with the Quaker mallet wielders carrying off the honors, 7¼ to 3¾ goals.

Low handicap players figured on the teams of all four clubs, and the Meadow Brook-Great Neck figures put both teams on an even footing with handicaps of 7 each. The Philadelphians were conceded 1 goal margin over their opponents, having 6 goals handicap to Piping Rock's 5.

Both victories were scored by liberal margins, and although this was the case the contests were both well contested and developed some fine playing. The intense heat had its effect on the mounts, and the players were compelled to change ponies frequently in order to stand up under the strain, and at the end both players and ponies were tired out.

The Quaker City aggregation played an unusually fast game, and with the combination of all-around and individual work outclassed the Wanderers in every period. W. P. Stewart of the Quaker four, playing at Position 1, showed a complete command of the ball, and was responsible for the tallying of four of the eight goals credited his team. He outrode his opponent, Stevenson, and in the opening period ran out two goals in rapid succession. The seventh and eighth periods were productive of fast work by both teams, and after several fast scrimmages, when both goals were threatened, the periods concluded with blank scores. Bryn Mawr's fast work in the eighth period, instead of being productive of a tally, caused one-quarter of a point reduction by a safety.

The Meadow Brook-Great Neck game was also well contested, but showed more individual playing. Morgan and Rathborne played the best game for the victors, while Phipps and Appleton did the best work for the losers. The line-ups and summaries:

Cooperstown Defeats Great Neck.

Special to The New York Times.

WESTBURY, L. I., July 8.—The semi-final game for the Hempstead Cups was played to-day, with a score of 14 to 3½ in favor of Cooperstown. Great Neck allowed Cooperstown three goals. Had F. S. Von Stade played No. 3 on Cooperstown's side, that team instead would have had to allow Great Neck one goal. But even that would not have helped Great Neck overcome the point gathering capacity of the up-State men. Mr. Von Stade was indisposed, and W. S. Jones took his place. The line-up and summary:

TO RACE UP EAST RIVER.

Lower Bay Flotilla to Sail to Larchmont for Prizes.

Arrangements are being made by Commodore George R. Le Sauvage of the Bensonhurst Yacht Club for another race through the East River to bring the lower bay racing flotilla from Bensonhurst to Larchmont in time to take part in the annual race week of the Long Island Sound organization. Last year seventeen boats took part in the contest, and as the Yacht Racing Association of Gravesend Bay has officially recognized the Sound classic this season and has arranged no dates for either of the Saturdays of Larchmont week, a larger fleet undoubtedly will take part in the contest this year.

The boats will start off Governors' Island on the morning of July 21, and should reach Larchmont before colors of the same date. The contest principally is for the knockabouts of the lower bay. However, if the Q and the other classes decide to take part in the contest, suitable prizes will be offered by the Larchmont Yacht Club.

It is not the only race that is being arranged to bring boats to Larchmont. Chairman Boucher of the Sound club has just received word from the Yacht Racing Association of Narragansett Bay that probably four or more boats will race to Larchmont. The boats that have entered the contest are W. E. Darling's Paloma, A. M. Chace's Idler, Mystery, and Alice W. All the craft are in the Q class.

In the second division for sloops Barclay Henry of Philadelphia sailed the Dorello to a victory in 3:58:13.

To-morrow the fleet will cruise to Burnt Coat Harbor and from there will have two more days of racing to Bar Harbor.

METROPOLITAN OPEN GOLF TOURNAMENT

Pairings Announced for Competion at Apawamis To-morrow.

Wynant D. Vanderpool, Secretary of the Metropolitan Golf Association, announced yesterday the list of entries and the pairings for the annual open championship tournament of the association which begins to-morrow at Apawamis. There are thirty-eight entries, six of whom are amateurs. Among the latter are Fred Herreshoff of the National links, who recently took part in the British championship; W. R. Thurston of the home club, whose 69, made a week or so ago, is the best for the course to date; Gardiner W. White of Oakland; James D. Foot, another of the home club; C. E. Van Vleck, Jr., of Baltusrol, and Oswald Kirkby, the New Jersey champion.

Jack Hobens, the Englewood professional who won the metropolitan open title at Baltusrol in 1908, is not entered, according to the list of the Secreary, nor is Jerome D. Travers, the metropolitan amateur title holder who was expected to be among those to tee up. Both of them were practising at Apawamis yesterday, however.

The first pair to drive off will be Robert Andrew of New Haven and F. Butler of Briarcliff, who are scheduled to start promptly at 9 o'clock. Five minutes later Alec Smith of Wykagyl, the Eastern title holder, will start with Alec Campbell of Brookline. Oswald Kirkby will have as a partner Tom McNamara of Boston, an American-born professional. Jack Dowling of Scarsdale will have Herreshoff as a partner. *Amateurs.

Judging from the scores made in the practice rounds at Apawamis yesterday, there will be new records hung up in the annual open championship tournament. Fred McLeod of St. Louis went out in 34 and returned in 37 for a 71, within two strokes of the course record. McLeod had never seen the Apawamis course until yesterday. Tom McNamara, the Boston home-bred professional, made the round in the same figures, going out in 34 and back in 37.

The sensational feat of the day went to the credit of Herbert Strong, the former Apawamis professional, who made the 360-yard fifteenth hole in two strokes. With the ground in its present baked condition, the long drivers are getting well past the mounds, and it was from such a position on the slope that Strong holed a mashie shot. Beating par two strokes there enabled Strong to make the round in 72, 36 each way. McLeod made his fine score while playing in a four-ball match with George Low against Alec Smith and Jerome D. Travers. Smith had a 73. Another good score was returned by Jack Jolly, the Newark representative, getting around in 72. Both Isaac Mackie and Joe Mitchell had rounds in 74, and aJck Hobens got a 75.

Although Hobens, McLeod, and George Sargent are not entered on the official list, they all expect to play in the championship. Quite a number have also arranged to compete in the four-ball competition there to-day.

SEABRIGHT TENNIS STARTS.

W. A. Larned Defaults in Singles Because of Intense Heat.

Special to The New York Times.

SEA BRIGHT, N. J., July 8.—Stirring matches in the Achelis Challenge Cup lawn tennis singles and in the Barrows-Crawford Cups doubles opened the tournament here to-day on the turf courts of the Cricket and Lawn Tennis Club. Karl H. Behr, the former internationalist, and the two Harvard veterans, Nathan W. Niles and Arthur S. Dabney, Jr., were in excellent form. To the disappointment of the fashionable gallery; William A. Larned, the National champion, decided to default because of the heat. His place in the singles was taken by A. E. Thurber, the former Columbia star, who was defeated in straight sets by Lyle E. Mahan at 6—4, 6—1.

Larned signified his intention of playing in the doubles, paired with Robert D. Wrenn, the former National champion. As a consequence, the two were advanced to the semi-final round of that event, receiving a bye in the first round, and then by a default over Dean Mathey and George M. Church, Jr., of Princeton.

The best of the singles was that in which Dabney defeated Frederick C. Inman, the former New York State and metropolitan champion, after three fast sets, at 2—6, 6—3, 6—4. Inman was successful in the first set in forcing his low drives and volleys as he ran in to close range at the net. It took Dabney a full set to find out how to meet the play. Then the old Harvard star began to send the ball streaking along the side lines and with a zip across court as Inman came in. He made it impossible for Inman to block him off, and, while the latter fought a plucky uphill game to the end, he was never able to handle Dabney's drives once ge got them going. The summary:

Achelis Challenge Cup Singles.—First Round—K. H. Behr defeated Robert Le Roy, 6—0, 6—1; L. E. Mahan defeated A. E. Thurber, 6—4, 6—1; N. W. Niles defeated G. M. Church, Jr., 6—3, 6—3; R. D. Little defeated Richard Stevens, by default; A. S. Dabney, Jr., defeated F. C. Inman, 2—6, 6—3, 6—4; E. W. Leonard defeated G. F. Touchard, by default.

Barrows-Crawford Cup Singles.—First Round—H. A. Plummer and B. S. Prentice defeated C. F. Watson, Jr., and G. L. Wrenn, Jr., 7—9, 9—7, 6—3.

Second Round—W. A. Larned and R. D. Wrenn defeated Dean Mathey and G. M. Church, Jr., by default.

Frederick C. Baggs and S. Howard Voshell added the Long Island championship lawn tennis doubles to their increasing list of titles yesterday in the postponed final of the tournament on the courts of the Kings County Club, Brooklyn. They engaged Dr. William Rosenbaum and Benjamin M. Phillips in the fourth and fifth sets of their unfinished match, defeating them by the complete score of 3—6, 7—5, 10—8, 1—6, 6—3.

WILDING CHAMPION AGAIN.

New Zealander Captures Title of Great Britain from Gore.

WIMBLEDON, Eng., July 8.—A. F. Wilding, of New Zealand, regained the lawn tennis championship of Great Britain to-day by defeating A. W. Gore, the English player, by three sets to one.

The score was 6—4, 6—4, 4—6, 6—4.

Rain Stops Louisville Tennis.

LOUISVILLE, July 8.—Four matches and part of the fifth marked the play in the bi-State tennis tournament, inaugurated to-day on the courts of the Louisville Country Club. John Schaaf, Cincinnati, and John Wentzell, Louisville, won a set each, rain stopping the play in the third. W. L. McElroy, Pittsburgh, defeated Arthur Middleton of Louisville in two sets, 6—2, 7—5, and J. J. Armstrong, St. Paul, defeated P. O'Bryan, Louisville, in another two, 6—3, 6—1.

Play will be resumed at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning, when Miss Sutton and Miss Browne of California, and Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Touchard of New York, will be in the play. C. P. Trask, Indianapolis, and J. R. Cowan, Danville, Ky., will play in the morning. Richard Palmer of New York will defend his title as the bi-State champion during the tournament.

May Sutton Defaults in Tennis.

CINCINNATI, July 8.—With the game standing 1 to 0 in favor of Miss May Sutton of California over Miss Marjorie Dodd of this city, rain to-day interfered with the playing of the championship round in the ladies' singles of the Tri-State tennis tournament. Owing to Miss Sutton's inability to remain longer in Cincinnati, the two sets and match were awarded to Miss Dodd to-night by default, thus giving her the second leg on the championship cup. Miss Sutton left immediately for Louisville to fulfill other tennis engagements.

Misses Brown of Los Angeles and Moyos of Canada won the finals in the ladies' doubles by defeating Miss Sutton and Mrs. Touchard of New York. The scores were 6—3, 6—5.

Terrace Club Tennis Tournament.

The Terrace Club of Flatbush has completed a scratch tournament, which George H. Jackson won. The finals were played on Saturday, and Jackson won the match in three straight sets, the runner up, C. F. Taylor, being very much bothered by the heat. The committee, Joseph A. McCarroll, S. William Burton, and Herman G. Treiss, have worked hard to bring this tournament to a successful ending. The doubles tournament will start on July 13, and when that is finished handicap singles and doubles will be in order.

Westfield Mixed Doubles Semi-Finals

In the semi-final round of the mixed doubles tennis tournament at the Westfield Golf Club Miss Hazel Gardner (former champion of Vassar College) and W. A. Gardner defeated Miss Perkins and F. Perkins, 6—1, 6—0, and Mrs. Samuel W. McAneny and Mr. McAneny defeated Miss Philip and W. H. Gomez, 6—3, 6—2.

PECK TO RACE CHAPPLE.

Newark Motor Cyclist May Check New Yorker's Winnings.

Arthur Chapple, the record-breaking motor cyclist, is expected to have his troubles to-morrow night at the Motor Stadium at Brighton Beach, when he takes the track for his race with Ray Peck, the Newark speed marvel, who has been riding miles on his home track in better than 40 seconds. These men have been matched for five miles, best two out of three heats, and a new mark seems assured through the speedy work each has been doing.

Chapple has an unbroken string of victories to his credit and has all the track records from one to five miles, but Peck's adherents assert that to-morrow night will see the end of Chapple's superiority. Peck is famed for the chances he will take in an effort to pass an opponent, and it is said that "Happy Days" Pitman, the referee, intends to warn him not to take too many liberties in the coming match.

Harry Thomas, the Quaker City rider, who went down to defeat on Monday night in his race with Chapple, will be an added starter in the open professional event. He is expected to make a sensation with a fast new motor, and show the way to such fliers as Wray, Davis, Cox, and Mercier in the handicap and scratch races. In the amateur events the best of the local contingent will be on hand, all ready and willing to take a chance at the dangerous game for the valuable prizes offered.

By the end of the week five new motors will be added to the number now in use, which means that the fields will be large enough to satisfy those who are looking for thrillers and prospective accidents.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 8.—The approximate value of the Kentucky Endurance Stakes, which will be run on Oct. 7, the opening day of the nine-day Fall meeting at Churchill Downs, will be $15,000, more than double that of last year. The value makes this the richest prize by far on the American turf. Secretary Lyman H. Davis of the new Louisville Jockey Club will send out entry blanks this week, and expects that the best long-distance horses in the country will be entered for this four-mile race. The race last Fall was won by Messenger Boy, owned by Eugene Lutz, and the same horse will be trained again for the race.

STORBECK EXHAUSTED FIGHTING STEWART

The South African Champion's Seconds Toss Sponge Into Ring in Sixth Round.

A sponge thrown from Storbeck's corner shortly after the beginning of the sixth round put an end to the bout between Jim Stewart of Brooklyn and Fred Storbeck, the South African heavyweight champion, at Madison Square Garden last night. In the ten-round semi-final, which was easily the best bout of the show, Young Jack O'Brien of Philadelphia outpointed Young Brown of New York, and in the first of the scheduled ten-round bouts Johnny Marto of the west side stopped Jimmy Flynn of Long Island City in four rounds.

The final bout, which was carded as the feature event of the programme, started off well, with both men showing plenty of action in the first two rounds. But in the three which followed Storbeck showed himself entirely lacking in all the qualifications of a first-class heavyweight, and Stewart's showing was far from impressive. Storbeck worked so hard in his futile efforts to get over some telling punches on the Brooklynite that he was all in before the third round was half over, and during the remainder of the bout he did little more than flounder around the ring and take Stewart's blows. The latter followed the South African around the ring as if he intended scoring a knockout, and although Storbeck left himself unprotected time and again Stewart could not score even a clean knockdown.

In the fifth round Storbeck went down to the canvas from exhaustion rather than from any punch by Stewart and took the count of five before arising. He was quickly down again for the count of nine, and again for seven just as the bell sounded. He walked around the ring the picture of an entirely exhausted boxer, while Stewart measured him and tried to land uppercuts continually without success.

In the sixth round Storbeck was so tired that Bob Armstrong, one of his seconds, helped him to arise from his chair when the bell sounded. He was floundering around the ring, doing nothing but taking punching, when Tom O'Rourke, his new manager, came to his relief by tossing a sponge to the centre of the ring.

The ten-round semi-final was a high-class exhibition, with Young Jack O'Brien, a brother of the noted Philadelphia Jack, furnishing most of the class. O'Brien, tall and rangy, showed wonderful speed and cleverness, and completely dazzled Young Brown, who proved a big disappointment after his work recently against Jack Goodman. O'Brien lacked the punching power which Brown possessed, but he more than made up for this defect by his great cleverness. He used a left jab to Brown's face almost at will, and occasionally hooked his right to the stomach with a resounding thud.

The first round was even, and in the third Brown tore in after his slender opponent and rushed him off his feet. These were the only rounds in which the Quaker did not carry off the honors. In the final round the boys furnished the best fighting of the bout, engaging in a hot rally just before the bell. Neither scored a knockdown during the bout.

In the first of the ten-round bouts Jimmy Flynn of Long Island City, who was substituted for Kid Burns of the west side, lasted only three rounds against Johnny Marto, another west side boxer. Marto had the advantage of seven pounds over his opponent, and was far more experienced. Flynn lasted long enough to show that he possesses a terrific punch, and he rocked Marto several times during the short bout. In the third round, when Flynn seemed strong enough to go much longer, Marto landed a left hook on the Long Island boy's chin and he went down. He tried to arise, but fell again, and Referee Billy Joh waved Marto to his corner.

BOXING CASE GOES OVER.

Application of National S. C. for Restraining Order To-morrow.

Justice Gavegan yesterday adjourned until to-morrow the argument in the application brought by the National Sporting Club of America asking for a stay restraining the State Boxing Commission from revoking the club's license until the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court shall review and pass on the legality of the action of the Boxing Commission in revoking the license.

The club had been already granted a writ of certiorari, which directs that the action of the Boxing Commission shall be reviewed by the Appellate Division. This review by the Appellate Division, however, cannot be had until the Fall term of that court. The club is asking this stay of the revoking of the license until the Fall term in order that it may put on boxing exhibitions during the Summer.

Commissioner O'Neil of the State Boxing Commission is out of town, and the Justice granted the adjournment in order to allow the Commissioner to be present at the argument.

The club's license was revoked by the commission upon the allegation that Referee Haley, at the club, gave a decision at the end of a boxing exhibition. The commission maintained that this giving of the decision was in violation of the so-called Frawley law, which governs such matters.

NOTES OF THE BOXERS.

Six of the leading featherweights of the East will appear in the all-star show at the St. Nicholas Rink to-morrow night. In the main event Patsy Kline of Newark will hook up with Young Wagner of New York, the semi-final will bring together Eddie O'Keefe of Philadelphia and Packey Hommey of New York, and in the first ten-round bout Tommy Houck will clash with Young Reilly of the west side. Two six-round bouts will precede the longer events.

A ten-round bout between Carey Phelan of Harlem and Frankie Mack of the Boys' Club will be the feature of Friday night's show at the Olympic A. C. of Harlem. In the six-round semi-final Wee Barton of New York will oppose Karl Horz of Oklahoma.

Joe Jeannette, the Hoboken heavyweight, is making another effort to force Jack Johnson into a match. Jeannette has made other efforts since Johnson won the title, but without result. Dan McKetrick, manager of Jeannette, yesterday signed with Manager Billy Gibson of the Garden A. C. for a bout at Madison Square Garden if Johnson can be persuaded to take on the Jerseyite. McKetrick agrees to let Johnson take the major portion of the purse if he will box here. In a signed statement issued by Jeannette yesterday the New Jersey negro says that Johnson should make good on his announcement that he would not fight Jeannette unless guaranteed $30,000 for his share of the purse. According to the Jerseyite, Victor Breyer of Paris has offered Johnson the sum demanded, and McKetrick has already signed the articles for him. Jeannette now weighs 195 pounds.

Manager Billy Gibson of the Garden A. C. declared yesterday that under no condition would he attempt to get Jack Johnson to box either Al Palzer or Luther McCarthy at Madison Square Garden. Neither of these white heavyweights would be a match for Johnson, in Gibson's opinion, and such a bout would tend to kill the boxing game in this State.

Glen Coakley, the Western middleweight, who is now being managed by Sam Fitzpatrick, may be seen in action against Jack Denning of the west side at a local club during the next few weeks. Coakley made a fine showing in his first New York bout at the Garden two weeks ago, and is regarded as one of the most promising young middleweights. Denning recently returned from France, where he went to box Marcel Moreau, whom he defeated at the Fairmont A. C. on New Year's Day last.

Hughie McGann, the Indianapolis heavyweight, whose New York debut against Gunboat Smith of California was a failure, has returned to Indianapolis. McGann feels that he was the victim of a chance blow and would like to have Smith go to Indianapolis for a return bout.

Al Palzer, who defeated Bombardier Wells at the Garden a short time ago, has decided that his next bout should be with Jack Johnson, and has called off his proposed bout with Luther McCarthy, which was originally scheduled for Madison Square Garden on July 18. According to advices from the West, Johnson announces that he will gladly take on Palzer for a bout Labor Day and then retire from the ring. Judging from Palzer's showing against Wells, the champion would have little difficulty with big Al.

The Sharkey A. C., which has been one of the most prominent of New York's smaller clubs for the past two years, is not running any boxing shows at the present time. Too much competition is the cause.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

LIBERAL KNIT GOODS ORDERS

Trading in Dry Goods Market Good for the Season.

Notwithstanding the dullness usually attendant upon the opening of the week, trading in the New York dry goods market yesterday reached generally satisfactory proportions. Sales reported in the primary market bore out recent predictions that the present week would witness increased activity on the part of buyers, and while the day's business in the secondary market was badly spotted, the results obtained were all that could be expected at this time.

Spot trading in Spring, 1913, lines of hosiery and underwear, in the primary market was generally active. A good number of knit goods jobbers from all over the country were in the city to attend the semi-annual meeting of their branch of the National Wholesale Dry Goods Association, and, having had only a half-day session, devoted the remainder of the day to looking over the merchandise offered. From all accounts, the orders placed were of liberal size, and according to one prominent hosiery factor, it may not be necessary for the road men to go out again this season.

The opening of standard lines of fine cotton fabrics for next Spring also attracted considerable attention in this market. Fancy goods and novelties are expected to meet an excellent demand this season, and some unusually handsome fabrics are contained in the lines shown to date.

Yesterday was fairly active in the jobbing end of the market, although more time was required to get out early Fall shipments than to book the new business offered. A good mail demand kept laces moving, but the call for wash and white goods, silks, underwear, hosiery and other merchandise of a seasonable nature was, as a rule, mediocre.

MORE BUYERS COMING HERE.

These are busy days with New York waist and dress manufacturers. A number of important out-of-town buyers are now in the market for Fall purchases, and as far as could be learned yesterday sellers were in an optimistic state of mind. Sales to date have been generally large, and while somewhat limited in number compared with those of last year, the aggregate amount of merchandise called for is fully up to previous levels. With other prominent buyers due here next week, a continuance of the present activity is looked for, and prospects of the season's spot sales exceeding those of a year ago are held to be very good.

All of the really up-to-date Fall models exhibited showed decided changes from Spring styles, the skirts, sleeves and collors having been essentially different. Some handsome gowns of the pleated skirt and modified pannier types are being shown and are meeting the favor of buyers to a considerable extent.

BIGGEST PAPER PRODUCTION.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Increases of 9,328 tons in production, 4,827 tons in shipments and of 988 tons in stocks on hand, are reported for May by the American Paper and Pulp Association to the Commissioner of Corporations. The May figures constitute a new record and show that the association's mills were operated to full capacity. The total production 116,460 tons, is a new record. The previous high production was 110,390 tons in June 1911.

BUSINESS NOTES.

About forty of the one hundred members of the knitgoods branch of the National Wholesale Dry Goods Association attended the semi-annual meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday. According to Secretary Dallam, the meeting was of an informal nature, and nothing of general interest was done. The notion branch of the association will meet on July 12, and the dress goods branch on July 16.

Samuel Floersheimer, President of the Waist and Dress Manufacturers' Association, reports satisfactory progress in the co-operative buying movement recently begun by that body. At present the activities of the movement are limited to the purchasing of paper, twine, and other staple supplies.

SIDELIGHTS ON SELLING.

According to the predictions of a recognized trade authority, an extensive use of silk street costumes for Fall and Winter will be in evidence this year.

Two-tone sweaters of fine yarn in blue and white and other natty color combinations are among the knit goods novelties offered for the coming season.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

To replace the $1,100,000 of six months 5 per cent. notes issued in January, and to provide for other needs, the Missouri, Kansas & Texas has sold Speyer & Co $1,500,000 of one-year 5 per cent. notes dated July 1.

W. W. Freeman, Vice President and General Manager of the Kings County Electric Light and Power Company and the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Brooklyn, has become interested in several water power and electrical developments in the South, and will become a Director of the Alabama Inter-State Power Company, which will operate those enterprises.

Lazard Freres said yesterday that the gold movement to Paris was over for the present.

Notice has been given by the committee of which Benjamin Strong, Jr., is Chairman that the Pere Marquette Railroad Company refunding mortgage 4 per cent. bonds, due 1955, bearing the coupon of Jan. 1, 1913, and all subsequent coupons, should be deposited under the protective agreement of April 8, 1912, with the Bankers' Trust Company, New York, or the Old Colony Trust Company, Boston, before Aug. 1, 1912.

CLUB HALTS SUBWAY PLAN.

Metropolitan Insists on Veto of an Entrance at Its Corner.

The attitude of the Metropolitan Club toward the Brooklyn Rapid Transit subway, which will pass its doors, at Sixtieth Street and Fifth Avenue, is causing the Public Service Commission much concern. The commission is now engaged in obtaining assents from property owners for the construction of subways in front of their property, and it was never expected that there would be any difficulty in obtaining the assent of the Metropolitan Club. However, at a meeting yesterday between Chairman Willcox and a subcommittee, consisting of Henry L. Morris, Frank K. Sturges, Adrian Iselin, and Percy R. Pyne, one of the points that they raised was that the club would welcome the undertaking provided no station should be erected at Sixtieth Street and Fifth Avenue before it gave its assent. The commission has always taken the ground that it cannot accept a consent from any property owner which is conditioned in any way. It is forced to stand to this principle, as if the consent of only a bare majority of property owners to a new route should be obtained the fact that some of them were conditioned might result in making their validity doubtful.

As a matter of fact, it is unlikely that a station would be built at Sixtieth Street and Fifth Avenue.

The commission is particularly desirous of getting the Metropolitan Club to give its consent, as it believes that that will mean that a large number of other property owners along Sixtieth Street will follow suit. If, however, it cannot obtain this, it can override the clubs objections, either by obtaining the co-operation of a majority of property owners of the street or by showing to the Appellate Division that the construction of the subway is a matter of public necessity and convenience.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Cod Liver Oil Containers Come In Duty Free—Other Decisions.

Regarding a protest filed by Frank H. Shallus, the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday decided in favor of the importer and reversed the decision of the Collector at Baltimore. The goods consisted of cod liver oil imported in thin sheet-metal coverings in the form of drums, which served as the inside lining of wooden overcasks. In conformity with that portion of Paragraph 151 of the present Tariff act relating to cylindrical or tubular tanks or vessels, duty was assessed on the metal coverings, but it was insisted that the containers were free, as the usual coverings of goods liable to specific duty.

B. Illfelder & Co. were the protestants against the assessment of duty at 4 cents per pound and 35 per cent. ad valorem, under the provisions of Paragraph 195, on lacquered tin boxes used as containers of paints. The importers maintained that the metal boxes were properly subject to duty at rate applicable to the paints. Following a previous ruling of the United States Court of Customs Appeals, in which the importers were also the litigants, the Collector's assessments were affirmed.

HIGHEST LEATHER PRICES.

Upholstery Market Reports Possibility of Further Advances.

Under the stimulus of an excellent demand and the maintained strength of the hide market all grades of upholstery leathers have shown a marked upward tendency of late, according to a prominent manufacturers' agent. Present prices show an average advance of from 10 to 12 per cent. over similar quotations on May 1. There is a scarcity of splits and deep buffs at the present movement, and values on these grades are comparatively high. Splits of a fair quality are quoted at 10 cents, machine buffs at 25@27 cents, and hand buffs at 30@33 cents. These prices are held to be the highest ever asked, but there is a strong possibility of further advances if the present strength of the hide market extends into the Fall, when the demand becomes active again. Tanners are not particularly anxious to book large orders at present figures.

The demand for these leathers has shown a tendency to slow up recently, but the call is still good for this time of the year. Spanish leathers have been in especially good repute.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

The increasing use of pigskin and its tendency to advance in price has raised the question as to whether the great waste due to leaving the skin on bacon, ham, and other pork products can be avoided. The Leather Trades Review estimates that there is a yearly loss of skins amounting to about $3,000,000 in the United Kingdom alone. The waste of skins is evidently unavoidable under present conditions, the chief difficulty being to find a method of curing that will prevent any loss of the meat if the rind, or skin, is removed.

The Government of Guatemala has appointed the following committee to have supervision of the preparations for the Guatemalan exhibit at the exposition forthcoming in California: Lemus, Juan J. Rodriguez Luna, and Fernando Luis P. Aguirre, Enrique Diaz Duran, Manuel Cruz. Communications for this committee should be directed to Guatemala City, C. A.

COMMODITY MARKETS.

Grain Slump and Cotton Boom Both Checked—Coffee Down.

The grain markets declined to new low levels again, rallied, and closed fairly steady on some evening up for the Government report to be issued at the close to-day. Weather conditions continued very favorable. Provisions opened weak, but closed with support again in evidence. Cottonseed oil feels the readjustment of prices in other markets. Cotton advanced excitedly to new high levels, with smaller acreage reports and continued advices of excessive moisture, weakening under the burden of realizing sales and bear pressure. Coffee ruled very weak. Liquidation was noted, and the decline has not stimulated consumption.

WHEAT.

At the low point of the session wheat was down 7 to 8 cents a bushel from the high at the end of June, closing with ¼ to ⅜c recovery from the low point. The conditions were against values. English cables were weak, although the Continent was fairly steady. World's exports were 13,024,000 bushels, against 10,418,000 last year. The amount afloat for Europe decreased 560,000 bushels, but the total is still about 2,000,000 bushels more than a year ago. Foreign markets were affected by the very favorable weather in Western Europe, as well as the favorable American conditions. Export bids have been reduced, and, although Baltimore cash wheat was quoted down to 99½c, exporters stated that the export parity had not been reached. The weather in the Winter wheat States was excellent for the continuation of harvest. Cutting of wheat is progressing rapidly. Yields are in some cases better, in others worse, than had been expected. In Michigan the yield given by the State would indicate a slightly larger crop, on the Government area, than figured last month. In Missouri the State report showed a gain of 11.6 points, and the preliminary estimate of yields was 12.4 bushels per acre. The Ohio State report was two points lower than last month. The Illinois State report showed a condition of 45, against a Government June condition of 41. The Spring wheat weather conditions were again reported favorable, and advices from the American and Canadian Northwest reflect marked improvement. Ample moisture is reported in the ground to practically mature the crop.

OTHER GRAINS.

CORN broke ⅝ to ⅞c, rallied, and closed fairly steady. July was relatively firm on the technical conditions. The break was the result of weather conditions and the expectation that the Government report will be a fairly favorable one, and in addition thereto it is confidently believed that the weather conditions have made for material improvement since July 1. In Missouri the State report says that corn is clean, and is making remarkable growth, with acreage increased 2.4 per cent. In Michigan the corn condition is relatively low, only 68, and also in Ohio, where the condition is 77. In Illinois the condition of corn July 1 was given at 80. The weather was very favorable through the West over Sunday. The Government report to-day will give the condition, acreage, and probable crop. Cash corn was nominal, at 79½c free on board for No. 2.

OATS.—The market was also weak, on favorable weather conditions, but rallied at the close, and July oats developed considerable strength on shorts. Crop news was excellent. In Missouri the crop has improved ten points in June; in Ohio the condition is given at 98, against 95 in June. Illinois reports are of good promise, and the trade is looking for a favorable Government report, in addition to which it is believed that weather conditions since July 1 have further improved the crop, as well as the crop promise of other feedstuffs. The Government report to-day will give the condition and probable yield per acre. Cash oats were lower, with standards and No. 3 white quoted at 51½c elevator; No. 2 white, 52c.

PROVISIONS.

The market opened weak, influenced by the weakness in feeding grain and apparent withdrawal of supporting orders, but support quickly came into the market, and most of the early loss was regained. Hogs were steady, with receipts only 75,000.

COTTON.

A tremendous volume of trading and a moderate amount of excitement marked the resumption of cotton dealings yesterday morning. Great strength was witnessed for a time, with Saturday's high records overtopped by the advances during the morning, these at their maximum totaling from 14 to 17 points, following gains at the outset of from 5 to 8 points. Gradually, however, transactions approached more normal proportions, but it was evident that the surplus offerings in the market had been increased to an important extent. Profit taking at the high levels was enormous, credited to leading spot interests and important bulls, and, while it was remarked that the technical position had been undermined, due to the elimination of many shorts, the assumption was that some of the principal bears had utilized the higher range of quotations for averaging on their sales, which ostensibly were made prematurely several days ago.

Stimulating to values were the early Liverpool cables. The foreign markets were dull, 11 to 13 points higher, and just before our opening were 13 to 15 points advance, the spot sales at Liverpool aggregating 10,000 bales. Unabated showers over Sunday in many sections of the East were also an influence, the rainfall being particularly heavy in parts of the Memphis district. Showery weather was again forecasted over night, and, although the wet conditions of the last week are expected to result in a rather bullish weekly weather report to-day on the central and eastern regions, apprehension seemed stilled by the official long-range forecast, stating that showers this week would be less frequent than those for the period just ended.

Considerable attention was attracted by the estimate of The New Orleans Times-Democrat for an area 8 per cent. under that of last year, several authorities believing that this was partly in confirmation of the Government figures. The report of this journal also stated that, aside from Texas, there was much in the prospect to be desired, the plant being late and spotted, with concern over insect damage. Labor is stated to be plentiful. There is still a difference of opinion, however, as to the accuracy of the recent official area figures, with the situation not clarified by Mr. Taylor's advices on Oklahoma to the National Ginners' Association, to the effect that the area in that State shows little change; the Government made the decrease in this State 12 per cent. Mr. Taylor also wired that the crop of Oklahoma may equal last year's, with a good Fall, but at present indications point to 20 per cent. less cotton, while the wet weather and insects have hurt Eastern Arkansas. From Southwestern Texas were claims of boll weevil damage, but no swerving in the hopeful accounts from the Southwest is indicated. The weekly review of a prominent Wall Street house stated that the week should be classed as favorable as a whole, but mention was here, too, made of the excessive rainfall in many of the Central and Eastern States.

COTTON OIL.

In sympathy with the sharp break in lard values early and the weakness in grain at that time, oil values gave way. Liquidation was noticed, with the decline checked by buying thought to be mainly in the nature of short covering. The strength in cotton during the morning was devoid of much influence, just as in the late trading the recovery in lard and the reversal of the action of cotton values failed to create marked price changes. It seemed to be the general opinion that whatever the improvement has been in the demand for cotton oil it would not be stimulated by the action of various markets recently.

COFFEE.

Coffee met a slow but steady decline, with foreign selling a feature. Opening prices were 9 to 11 points lower and closed at about lowest, with a net loss of 25 to 28 points on total sales of 87,000 bags. Havre closed at noon, with a loss of 1@1¼ francs, while Hamburg declined ½ to ¾ pfennig. Rio was unchanged and Santos unchanged to 50 reis lower. Receipts were 23,000 bags at Rio and Santos, against 29,000 last year, but the day's receipts at Sao Paulo were 42,000, against 21,000 the previous day. Cost and freight offers from Brazil were easy at a decline of 10 to 12½ points.

Spot coffee, dull and ⅛c lower, at 14½c for Rio 7.

Total warehouse deliveries in the United States for the week were 70,853 bags, against 91,314 last week and 69,613 last year. Of the former amount New York had 44,437 bags.

Receipts at Rio and Santos for the week totaled 176,000 bags, against 139,000 last week, 173,000 last year, and 263,000 two years ago. Contract prices follow:

PAR VALUE

The par value of a stock is often very misleading. Some with a par value of $10.00 a share are selling at $100 and over—others with $100 par value are selling at $1.00.

The real value of a property is not what is printed on the certificate, but what is shown from the assets, the earnings, and the dividend records.

Don't put your money in any stock or bond until you know the past and present history, as well as the future possibilities of the property. Let us look up this information. It is the service we offer you.

Each week we issue a weekly letter dealing with one particular stock, which after careful study we believe a good investment, yielding a good return and also one which should increase in value. This will be sent on request. Remember, we are brokers for the small as well as the large investor. We make a specialty of executing small lots of stock, either to be bought outright, on margin, or on our monthly payment plan.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Renewed Decline in Prices—Money Situation Principal Factor.

Weakness in the stock market yesterday was probably sufficiently explained by the fact that the Clearing House banks had on Saturday reported a large deficit in their reserves, which was very naturally followed yesterday by a good deal of shifting of loans for the purpose of making good the reserve deficiency. Other influences were appealed to as explanations of the decline, but it was probably the monetary situation which was the real key note of the day's events on the Stock Exchange. At the same time there was much less animation in the money market than might have been expected after such a showing as was made in Saturday's bank statement.

There was no general calling of loans, and borrowers found it easy to replace at lower rates loans which they had with a few institutions which yesterday marked up their call loans to 3½ per cent. The ruling rate had been 3 per cent., and remained so yesterday. Time money was quoted firmer, but there was very little borrowing. Had it been otherwise call rates must have been affected much more than they were, for only the absence of any urgent demand for accommodation could prevent a flurry of money on such a showing as was made on Saturday. The slight effect which the occurrence of a deficit of more than $7,000,000 in the reserves of the Clearing House banks had upon interest rates is from one point of view a striking indication of the ease of the monetary situation, but on the other hand it helps to emphasize how slight has been the margin of reserve over the minimum required. It is because that minimum is in itself so large that such an event as the money market was discussing yesterday can occur without causing borrowers any uneasiness. There was ample indication yesterday that the situation, so far as the impairment of the bank reserves at this centre is concerned, would quickly right itself. If need be, money could be drawn from abroad, but there is now little American money in European markets available for immediate return. If we did obtain money from Europe at this time it would largely be by way of loans made in anticipation of the maturing of the advances which we ourselves have made to the German market. These are still outstanding in fairly large amount, but for the most part they will not become due before September. They have been made for periods extending from that month on to November. The payment of these loans will increase the available supply of funds in this market during the period when the crop demands will be largest, but the fact that we have these loans abroad does not supply an immediate source of relief in such a situation as confronted the banks yesterday. That, however, will be fully cared for by readjustments which will occur naturally in our own market probably before the end of the present week.

Reading the day's stock market in the light of the events in the money market it would seem that while there was more or less real liquidation, the decline in prices was at least in part due to bear pressure. The borrowing demand for stocks would seem to bear out this view, and the fact that the average decline of fifty issues was short of a point also seemed to suggest that the pressure of actual liquidation was not very great. Much was being made in Stock Exchange circles of the fact that the Stanley Committee is expected soon to make its report, it being alleged in this connection that the committee would most probably argue in its report that the Steel Corporation should be dissolved. Inasmuch as the public probably already knows all that the Stanley report will tell about the affairs of the Steel Corporation and that the Government is already suing the corporation as a combination in violation of the Sherman law, it is difficult to imagine in what respect the Stanley report can contain any surprises fit to be used as stock market arguments. Several State crop reports, less favorable than might have been desired, might have been more influential in shaping Stock Exchange opinion than they seemed to be, but in this matter there was naturally a disposition to reserve judgment until the publication of to-day's Government report.

Another new low record in consols lacked the element of novelty. Money was dearer in London and discounts firmer, although the Bank of England obtained the bulk of the $3,500,000 gold which reached the London market yesterday. Here it was made known that the gold export movement to Paris was over at least for the time being, but the movements in the London market suggested a condition which might well lead to a resumption of the effort of the French market to obtain gold here as soon as the situation in New York would seem to warrant further withdrawals from this centre.

Freight Cars Earn More.

Members of the American Railway Association have reported for March an increase in the efficiency with which their freight traffic is handled. The average distance traveled by each car a day for that month was 24.5 miles. This is a new record car movement for March, comparing with a maximum of 25.6 miles a day achieved in the busy crop moving season of October, 1909. In March of 1911 the average distance traveled was about 23 miles. The average daily earnings of each car were $2.57 in March, which is also well above the customary earnings for that period. In the late Fall, when the volume of traffic moving is usually at its highest, a freight car averages from 10 to 15 cents a day more than this figure, but for March, an average of $2.57 is considerably better than usual. These figures reflect an increase in traffic efficiency as well as the spurt in general business which was felt in the past Spring.

Hill and the Terminal Problem.

With the issuance yesterday by the Great Northern Railway of the preliminary figures of the year's gross earnings, any doubt which may have remained as to the certainty of a large balance from the year's operations over dividend and interest requirements was removed. In June the company maintained its recent steady gains, reporting total revenues of $5,756,000, an increase of $219,000. For the full year the gross earnings were $65,801,000, an increase of $4,567,000 over 1911. With a large surplus over the dividend needs now an assured fact there has been more or less speculation over what use will be made of the balance. Friends of James J. Hill will not be surprised if he decides to appropriate a large sum, possibly $2,500,000 or $3,000,000, for the beginning of a fund out of which terminal needs will be cared for. Mr. Hill has frequently called attention to the fact that the railways of the United States must be prepared to expend millions in the near future to avoid serious congestion at terminal points.

Slump in Tobacco Issues.

Yesterday's slump in American Tobacco and stocks of the Tobacco Trust's former subsidiaries was the first substantial decline after a month of almost continuous new high records daily. American Tobacco dropped 4 points after the first sale, declining from the opening at 305 to 301 on two transactions of 100 shares each. It then sold down rapidly on liberal offerings, one block of 1,800 shares being sold at 301 in the first half hour of trading. The low level of 294, reached before noon, proved the low price of the day, and from there it was carried up again to 297 on a few sales. On the rally, which continued until shortly after noon, the price went as far as 299. The close was at 297. At its low price the stock was 30 points below the high price of the year, 324⅛, reached on July 1. It was still, however, 50 points above the low price of the year, 241⅛, touched on Jan. 11, shortly after the declaration of the initial common dividend of 2½ per cent. was declared. The decline in Tobacco common carried with it stocks distributed when the original American Tobacco Company was dissolved. American Snuff closed with a net loss of 3 points, and P. Lorillard with a loss of 3¼. On the Curb United Cigar Stores declined heavily, and British-American was also weak. Much of the selling, it was rumored, was profit-taking by those who have made money on the rise, but there was also a tendency to qualify the stories of a melon-cutting next month, on which most of the recent rise had been based.

Weakness of Coppers.

The weakness in the copper issues continued yesterday and substantial declines were general in these issues. Meanwhile, the market for the metal remains at 17⅝ cents a pound, but abroad there were further declines in the speculative market and here small sales were made at fractional concessions from the established price. The large producers have expressed the belief that the figures of the Copper Producers' Association, to be issued to-day, will show little or no changes in stocks from the last report.

Criticism of Cotton Figures.

The Government report of cotton acreage, indicating a shrinkage of 7 per cent., is meeting with a good deal of criticism in the trade. One authority whose figures in the past, as checked up by Census Bureau reports, have been notably more accurate than the Government's, put the decline at only a little more than ½ of 1 per cent. Other private sources, however, have reported a larger shrinkage, and The New Orleans Times-Democrat's report, the latest, puts the shrinkage "outside of Texas" at 8 per cent. Texas, it concedes, will produce a bumper crop. One of the large spot houses in commenting on the strength of cotton abroad had this to say of the Government figures: "There, the estimate, bearing the stamp of officialdom, is taken more seriously than here, where private advices are more reassuring. The acreage figures are especially open to criticism and an addition to them is expected as the season advances. The condition is also believed to be too low, and to have been improved by the favorable weather since the 25th of last month."

Fire Losses Decrease.

Although the aggregate of the losses by fire from the first of the year to date are still ahead of those sustained by the insurance companies in the corresponding period of 1911, the June figures, as compiled by The Journal of Commerce, are substantially better than in the same month last year. The figures, which cover the United States and Canada, make the losses for the first six months of 1912, $134,417,750. This compares with $129,691,750 for the first half of 1911. In June the losses this year were $16,103,450 compared with $20,691,950 in June of last year.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Price Movements Reactionary and Many Issues Show Small Declines at the Close.

Curb prices were reactionary yesterday, and there were few issues which did not show losses at the close. United Cigar Stores sold off sharply, dropping from 257 to 248 and closing at 249. British-American sold off from 30¼ to 29⅞, and closed at 30 after sales of 3,000. Among the coppers there were also a number of declines on fairly active trading. Braden sold from 7⅝ to 7⅛ on sales of 1,700. British-Columbia, Giroux and Greene-Cananea each closed ⅛ below the opening. Mason Valley sold down from 14 to 13½ and closed at 13⅝ after sales of 1,100 shares. Chicago Elevated 5s and Western Pacific 5s were the only active issues in the bond list. The former were unchanged from the opening at 98¼, and the latter rose from 84¼ to 84⅝.

Transactions reported yesterday in the outside market, with opening, high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

STOCKS OUT OF TOWN.

Dealings in Local Issues Narrow and Prices Irregular.

Trading in the principal out-of-town markets yesterday was sluggish, and price movements narrow, as reported in special dispatches to THE TIMES.

Houston Oil dividend certificates advanced one-half of one point on moderate demand in Baltimore. The general list was lifeless, but steady.

Copper shares opened weak in Boston under the depressing influence of a further decline of 17s 6d in London copper warrants for spot and futures, and remained soft and uncertain throughout the day. North Butte was the strongest stock in the list in the early hours, selling up to 32 at one time on the receipt of news of the cutting of the Snowball Vein on the 2,400 foot level. Isle Royale was firm till late in the session. Butte and Superior was accumulated again by the interests that recently advanced it to 51⅝. The market was exceedingly thin and was in no condition for liquidation. Selling was at no time insistent, but buying orders were mainly for small lots. The Calumet group was particularly soft.

Sears-Roebuck common was the feature on the Chicago Stock Exchange, selling up to 192, compared with 190¾ Saturday. It reacted sharply before the close, retaining only one-quarter of one point of the day's gain. Public Service preferred, Peoples' Gas, Pacific Gas, and Shipbuilding preferred showed an easier tone. Union Carbide reflected some strength, while in the bond market the feature was Diamond Match debenture certificate 6s.

The Philadelphia market was irregular and without feature. The weakness in New York was resisted with some vigor, but the local list finally yielded, and prices fell off slightly. With the exception of some interest in the local tractions and Lake Superior the market was taken up largely by United States Steel, the majority of the local shares being represented only by a few small transactions.

BOURSES OF EUROPE

London Market Weak, Consols Touching New Low Record—Steadiness on Continent.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Tuesday, July 9.—The Times says in its City article to-day:

"The market yesterday repaid a large sum due to the Bank of England, the operation completing the repayment of the advances obtained at the end of last month. Less money was offering, and day-to-day loans were not arranged at under 2 per cent., while the terms for fixtures hardened slightly. The India Council renewed a fair amount at 2¼ per cent. for a month.

"Discount rates were distinctly firmer, partly on the less plentiful supply of money and partly on the very unsatisfactory New York Associated Banks statement.

"Leading Continental exchanges moved in favor of this country, both Paris and Berlin advancing to an appreciable extent.

"A small portion of the bar gold in the open market, will, it is expected, be taken for the Continent, leaving fully £500,000 for the Bank of England.

"Most of the departments of the Stock Exchange presented a very dreary appearance. There was no inclination to increase commitments in view of the carry-over which begins in the mining markets to-day. Consols at one time reached a new low level, but the price rallied at the close.

"Prices continued to dwindle in the home railway market, owing to further realizations, and there was a fresh break in copper shares.

"Canadian Pacific Railway shares, after showing strength owing to Continental support, relapsed in sympathy with the weakness in the American market, which was under the shadow of the very bad associated banks statement.

"The news of the spread of foot-and-mouth disease stimulated a demand for shares of various meat cold storage companies, in which more business was passing than for some time past.

"Elsewhere the markets presented no features of interest. Most of the members seem to be resigning themselves to the melancholy prospect of quiet business until after the holidays."

PARIS, July 8.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were steady.

Three per cent. rentes, 92f 25c for the account.

BERLIN, July 8.—Prices on the Boerse to-day were quiet but steady.

Old Theories Are Passing.

ONE OF THEM is that a high return from an investment and safety of principal are incompatible. This theory has been to an extent exploded by the income yield and the substantial character of the preferred stocks of long-established, prosperous and efficiently managed manufacturing companies, particularly those that for many years have continuously added to the individual and community wealth of New England.

INVESTORS APPRECIATE the publicity that is being given to this field of opportunity that has heretofore been cultivated chiefly by local capitalists. This is shown by increasing purchases of these high-grade manufacturing preferred stocks from all sections of the country.

FOR THE BENEFIT OF ALL we issue every month a 40-page circular giving the latest and most accurate details regarding this class of investments. Send for it.

The Fourth Dimension of Bond Buying

Security, yield, marketability, and the possibility of appreciation in value, are four factors that should always be considered in the purchase of bonds. Most investors give thought to the first three. The fourth is too often overlooked.

Appreciation in value follows definite laws. By reading these laws correctly the future market price of a bond can be foretold.

For sixty years our policy has been to recommend bonds so secured by strong mortgages on properties of vital necessity to the public that the continuing demand of investors and the normal growth of business will cause an enhancement in value of 5 to 15 per cent.

At the present time we can recommend for investment two such securities, and will take pleasure in giving further information.

Investor's Question.—What are the characteristics of a high-grade investment bond house?

Answer II.—A high-grade investment bond house investigates minutely the value and the condition of the properties on which its securities are issued before purchasing them. It also keeps in touch with these properties and procures the continuance of prosperous conditions.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Selling of a general character carried prices lower on the Consolidated Stock Exchange, with the volume of business increasing as the decline proceeded. Reaching of numerous stop loss orders added to the pressure upon the market. The main influence affecting trading sentiment adversely was last Saturday's unfavorable Clearing House statement which was evidently causing fear of money market trouble. At the lowest levels prices exhibited relative firmness compared with the New York Stock Exchange. Trading was on a broad scale, with the list embracing fifty-four different stocks.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Young Women's Christian Association Now Owns Lexington Avenue Block Front—West Side Deals—Sale in Dyckman Tract—Bronx and Brooklyn Transactions.

Lexington Avenue figured prominently in the realty market yesterday, showing a steadily increasing activity for property below Fifty-ninth Street for investment and improvement purposes. Of particular importance was the announcement that the Young Women's Christion Association is the buyer of the large southwest corner of the avenue and Fifty-third Street, comprising a group of old five-story flats from 606 to 614 Lexington Avenue. The property, fronting 100.5 on the avenue and 103 on the street was sold a short time ago by Horace S. Ely & Co. for Louis Ettlinger, but the name of the buyer was withheld at the time.

With this purchase the Y. W. C. A. owns the entire block front on the west side, between Fifty-second and Fifty-third Streets, the Fifty-second Street corner having been acquired over a year ago, and on it a fine nine-story building from plans by the architect, Donn Barber, has just been erected. While no definite announcement has been made, it is understood that in the near future the adjoining Fifty-third Stret corner will be improved for the work of the association similar to the Fifty-second Street corner.

Just north of this block the old four-story dwelling at 649 Lexington Avenue, a short distance south of Fifty-fifth Street, was purchased by Harris and Maurice Mandelbaum from the Becker estate. Albert B. Ashforth negotiated the deal. The plot is 19 by 80 feet, and it has not changed hands since 1870. This is the third Lexington Avenue purchase made by the Mandelbaums on Lexington Avenue within the last two months.

West Side Apartment Deals.

The six-story apartment house known as the Florence on the southwest sorner of Amsterdam Avenue and 176th Street, which was acquired a short time ago by Harry B. Davis, has been sold by him to the F. & F. Company. In part payment Mr. Davis takes eighteen flats in Brooklyn on Forty-fourth Street, near Thirteenth Avenue, divided into rows, one on the north and the other on the south side of the street, each on a lot 25 by 100 feet. The Florence apartment occupies a plot 100 by 120 and faces High Bridge Park.

The nine-story apartment at 46 to 56 West Eighty-third Street, covering a plot 100 by 100, was reported to have been sold by the Hennessey Realty Company, Joseph Polstein President. The house was recently completed, and is known as the Lathrop.

$450,000 Madison Avenue Lease.

An important Madison Avenue deal just above the Ritz-Carlton Hotel and which will result in the erection of a handsime building for doctors and dentists on the southwest corner of Madison Avenue and Forty-eighth Street, has just been made by S. Osgood Pell & Co., who have leased the property for a term of twenty-one years for the owner, Charles Weinberg. The lessees are a syndicate formed of several members of the company, which erected a short time ago the doctor' building at 40 East Forty-first Street, and which has been highly succesful.

The property comprises the two old houses at 24 and 26 East Forty-eighth Street, a plot 44.9 by 100.5. The aggregate rental for the twenty-one years is about $450,000. The property has changed hands four times within a little over a year, the present owner, Charles Weinberg, acquiring it last month from Sheppard K. De Forest for about $310,000. The new building is to be ready for use about Feb. 1, 1913.

The Stilwell homestead on King's Highway and West First Street, Gravesend, covering a plot 100 by 650 feet, has been sold by Mrs. Georgene S. Voorhees to Henry Grassman for about $35,000. The brokers were Studwell & Burkhard and J. Howard Ashfield.

Leases Adirondack Camp.

Pease & Elliman have rented for Mrs. Frederick Scott Waite her camp on Lake Placid in the Adirondacks, to Mrs. E. F. Droop of Washington, D. C.

New Assessment Law.

The new law regulating the payment of assessments passed by the last State Legislature provides that when an assessment upon real estate exceeds 5 per cent. of its total assessed valuation, the assessments shall be divided into ten equal instalments.

The first instalment shall become due and payable and become a lien just as though it were the entire assessment. The remaining instalments become payable annually thereafter, with interest at the rate of 5 per cent. a year. After the instalment becomes due and payable it bears interest at the rate of 7 per cent. a year until paid. Instalments not due may be paid, with interest at 5 per cent. up to the date of payment, at any time.

Notes.

Joseph P. Day has sold for the Manhattan Beach Estates a plot, 40 by 100, on Amherst Street, 180 feet south of Oriental Boulevard, to H. Hollman.

William A. White & Sons state that plans are about ready for altering the private dwellings, 805 and 807 Lexington Avenue, adjoining the northeast corner of Sixty-second Street. The lower two floors are to be occupied by the owner, Albert Klank, for a grocery business.

The first number of The Real Estate Magazine, which is the successor to and embodies City Life and Municipal Facts, has just been issued. It is published under the auspices of the Allied Real Estate Interests and is the official organ of the association. Among the contributors to the initial number are George T. Mortimer, George A. Hurd, Dock Commissioner Tompkins, Edward B. Boynton, John R. Paris and William H. Chesebrough.

Slawson & Hobbs have rented the private houses at 585 West End Avenue for Mrs. J. A. Forman to R. A. Cross, and 550 West 113th Street for Mrs. Newland to the Claremont Republican Club.

NEW JERSEY—FOR SALE OR LET.

GETTING AS SCARCE AS FOUR-LEAF CLOVER SO HURRY ALONG

IF YOU WANT TO OWN PROPERTY

AT A SHORE RESORT

Now's the time to speculate in water front property, as supply and demand create increased values and the demand for property along the shores is increasing all the time. The day is not far off when there won't be enough to supply the demand, as nature is creating no more shore front property, and THAT limitation must mean big profits to owners of lots on or near the shore.

Fortunes are constantly being made in real estate located along the Jersey coast. The history of Asbury Park, Ocean Grove and other famous resorts is well known to all. In 1888 a small parcel of unimproved property at Coney Island was offered for $8,000 and it was hard to find a buyer at that figure. Some few years later this same sand dune without any improvements sold for $447,000; to-day the present owner would not sell for $1,200,000.

The early history of Atlantic City is that it sold for $200. Now the property on the Boardwalk is worth $1,000 to $5,000 a front foot. A recent sale there was a plot at $150,000, which less than ten years ago sold for $6,000. Besides, other lots at a popular watering resort could be bought for a few hundred dollars which to-day are worth $40,000 to $50,000.

Ocean Gate is young, but is growing faster than any other shore resort on any coast, and water front lots and other sites at present prices are a good purchase for big profits in the near future. History is bound to repeat itself, and why not? Ocean Gate is within easy riding distance by rail from Asbury Park, Belmar, Sea Girt and Point Pleasant, and other shore resorts, and we are offering very choice bungalow lots on new section at prices as low as $100, upon convenient monthly payments. Shore front lots and business sites at attractive prices and terms. Write, call or phone for tickets for our Free Guest Train to Ocean Gate on Sunday next in the forenoon.

NEW JERSEY—FOR SALE OR LET.

"For 5 Years I Have Looked For a Place Like This"

—Last Sunday a visitor to Red Bank Estates made the above quoted remark. He said further:

"Part of my family are fond of the seashore and the rest of us like the country. Never before have I seen the two so ideally combined, within the average man's means, as here at Red Bank."

And the latter remark so well states the truth that we had to print it.

Red Bank Estates

Well-peopled, prosperous and beautiful, Red Bank is growing day by day. That's the reason for the new addition—Red Bank Estates. A beautiful tract of rolling country between the hills and the ocean—and only a few minutes from the station where commuters' trains leave every ten minutes.

Briefly, that describes Red Bank Estates. Here any one may have a home built in accordance with his desires and with regard to his general income.

Two railroads touch here—the Pennsylvania and the New Jersey Central—while a trolley brings the city within easy reach. The property makes easily available the splendid New York-Atlantic Highlands Express Boat Service.

But this is only part of the story. "From Pillar to Post" is a book that tells the rest of it. Better write for it to-day.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Warm weather continues generally except in South Atlantic and East Gulf States and extreme northwest and there was a further increase in temperature over the interior, with high readings ranging from 90 to 100 degrees.

There were thunder showers in the Gulf and South Atlantic States, the Ohio and Upper Mississippi Valleys, and the extreme northwest, practically the same areas that were covered during Sunday. Over the remainder of the country the weather was fair.

Scattered thunder showers will continue Tuesday and probably Wednesday from the lake region to the Gulf of Mexico, and will probably extend by Wednesday into portions of the Middle Atlantic States and New England.

In the extreme West the weather will be generally fair Tuesday and Wednesday.

There will be no material relief from prevailing high temperatures. Winds along the New England and Middle Atlantic Coast will be moderate south and southwest; south Atlantic Coast, moderate, mostly southeast and south.

Steamships departing Tuesday for European ports will have moderate south and southeast winds, with fair weather to the Grand Banks, of the Middle Atlantic States and New England.

EDUCATION NOTES.

The Committee on By-Laws and Legislation of the Board of Education has made the important ruling that the three-year tenure of eligible lists, fixed by the "anti-merging law," is not applicable to eligible lists established prior to its enactment, but that the tenure of said lists is determined by the old bylaw, which provides for the expiry of a license after a period of five years, during which the licensee has not taught as a regular teacher in the New York City public school system.

The following-named members of Education Primary Council No. 66 have been elected as delegates to the annual convention of the New York State Association of Civil Service Employes to be held at Rochester on Sept. 1: William T. Blunt, Thomas E. Bussey, William Casson, Frank V. Daly, William Doane, Alice Jepson, Harry Osborne, Virginia Small, and John J. Sullivan. The association will redouble its efforts to obtain legislative provision for an equitable system for retirement of civil service employes, for adequate protection against unjust removals and suspensions, and for the further extension of the merit system.

Miss Maude L. Pitts, daughter of Josiah H. Pitts, secretary to City Supt. Maxwell, is taking a Summer course at Dartmouth College for the degree of B. A. Miss Pitts is a graduate of Adelphi College, Brooklyn, from which she received the degree of M. A. She has taught French the past term in the Bay Ridge High School. Mrs. Georgia H. Pitts, her mother, is spending the Summer at her former home in Maine.

The election of the Executive Committee of the Board of Education will be held at its meeting to-morrow.

By direction of City Supt. Maxwell the attendance officers of the Compulsory Education Bureau are conducting an investigation of the factories in the five boroughs, to see that there is no violation of the law which prohibits the employment of children under 14 years of age.

The Association of Women Principals of Public Schools has requested the Board of Education to adopt a by-law providing that any member of the teaching or supervising staff who is credited with twenty or more years of service may take a year's leave of absence on half pay.

The Board of Education will act to-morrow on the transfers of two Principals in elementary schools, Frederic W. Mar and Louise E. Tucker, and on the appointment of three Principals of elementary schools, Irving A. Hazen, Ambrose Cort, and Horace M. Snyder. Mr. Snyder's name has been substituted for that of William Krampner, which has been withdrawn by the Board of Superintendents.

An annex to the Richmond Hill High School is to be established in Public School 51, Queens Borough.

Anna C. Thompson has been nominated as teacher of the deaf in Public School 162, Brooklyn.

Jennie E. Murray has been nominated as assistant teacher of elocution in the Wadleigh High School, and Grace L. Clark as a model teacher in the Jamaica Training School for Teachers.

The Board of Education at its meeting tomorrow will receive reports from the Committee on Elementary Schools relative to the transfer of twenty-five teachers in elementary schools, the appointment of twenty-seven assistants to Principals, and the appointment of four teachers of special branches.

The Committee on High Schools and Training Schools will report as to the appointment of thirty-three teachers in high schools, assignment of eighteen teachers in charge of high school annexes, appointment of fifty-one persons as teachers in continuation high schools, promotion of three persons from junior teacher to assistant teacher in high schools, and appointment of four teachers in the Brooklyn Training School.

The Board of Superintendents has requested permission to withdraw the nomination of William T. Morrey as first assistant in history and civics for the Bushwick High School.

City Superintendent Maxwell will deliver lectures on Aug. 28 and 29 in Chicago to the school teachers of Cook County, Ill.

Commissioner Harrison will offer a resolution at to-morrow's meeting to empower the Executive Committee to perform the administrative powers of the Board of Education from July 11 to Sept. 10.

HOW HAVEMEYER GOT STOCK.

$10,000,000 Issued to Him Without Consideration, Court Rules.

TRENTON, N. J., July 8.—Vice Chancellor Stevens in an opinion filed in the Court of Chancery to-day in the suit of Norman D. Hooker and others against the executor and heirs of Henry O. Havemeyer, held that $10,000,000 worth of stock of the National Sugar Refining Company was issued to Havemeyer without consideration.

The Court asked for further argument by counsel before making a decree to carry out the effect of the decision and suggested different ways in which the decree might be made.

Havemeyer came by this stock at a time when James H. Post, representing him, acquired the stock of the New York Sugar Refining Company, the National Sugar Refining Company and the Mollenhauer Sugar Refining Company for $8,250,000, and consolidated the companies into the National Sugar Refining Company with an authorized capital of $20,000,000.

It was asserted on behalf of the defendants in the suit decided to-day that the acquisition of the three companies and the combining of them into one gave them a value far in excess of what was paid for the companies acquired individually. This added value could not be capitalized to Havemeyer's benefit, the Court decided.

One of the questions left open to be decided after a hearing, is whether the $10,000,000 of stock is to be continued in existence and paid for by the Havemeyer estate or cancelled entirely.

TOMBS FUGITIVE SCALED PRISON WALL

Felling Keeper and Taking Revolver, Desperate ex-Convict Climbed to Window Ledge, Jumped to Wall and Dropped.

While deputy wardens were groping their way through the underground passages of the Tombs in the early morning yesterday, firing now and then a shot at a shadow thinking it might be the shadow of George Witson, the ex-convict and burglar who had disappeared earlier from his cell in the seventh tier, felling a keeper in the yard and getting his revolver, the prisoner himself was enjoying the free air of the streets.

After Witson attacked the veteran keeper, William Houlihan, and took his revolver from him in the yard just as he came up through a manhole from the passages below, he disappeared, it was supposed, within the dark corridors of the prison. While revolver shots were being fired through the night, with the idea of getting a sound from him in his lurking place, a cordon of police was drawn up around the prison wall outside, ready to fire upon or capture him quietly, as circumstances might warrant, should he attempt to escape by scaling the walls.

Now there is ample evidence that the desperate prisoner escaped over those very walls, but it is probable that it was before the police, who watched the walls throughout the night, were summoned. The ex-convict's departure was doubtless as sudden and well planned as his egress and flight from his cell. The course he took is plainly marked by his foot and finger prints.

The prison wall turns the corner fronting Centre and Franklin Streets in close proximity to the building, just where there is an iron grating across the window of the storeroom. Finger prints on the grating of the storeroom window show that the escaping burglar must have pulled himself upon the window ledge and from there made a long leap to the wall, because in the scraped bars and mortar his footwork is plainly enough marked. Having gained the top of the wall, his descent to the street was made easy by a wooden coffee stand below, and built against the wall on the outside. He had but to lower himself to the stand and drop to the street once the top of the prison wall was reached.

It is known that this is precisely what he did, because three boys, standing on the opposite side of the street, were looking on, with wide awake interest, when he came over the wall, reached the street in two light falls, and bounded across to where they stood.

They didn't know what had been going on inside the prison, or that at that moment every guard and turnkey there that could be spared was furthively searching cells, cellars, and corridors, revolver in hand, and firing at the least sign of danger from a prestumably hidden foe. The boys were too absorbed, in fact, to think about it, beyond the interesting fact that a man was coming over the prison wall in a hurry, an unusual sight to them. They were neighborhood boys, and knew that this was out of the order of things. They were more surprised the next instant when he ran up to them, snatched the cap off one of their heads, and ran on at top speed.

Following a preliminary investigation made personally yesterday by Commissioner Whitney, Edward Crudden, day keeper of Tier 7, from which Witson made his escape, and Francis Riley, night keeper, will both be called for examination at a hearing which the Commissioner will open this mornnig. Crudden will be asked to explain whether Witson was reported in his cell at the time the keeper went off duty, while Riley must show why he did not report the prisoner missing until two hours after he relieved Crudden. Keeper Houlihan, who was surprised and disarmed by the prisoner in the yard, will also be closely questioned.

As yet, the course of the prisoner can be traced back through the coal bins in the engine room and through the utility shaft which serves as a conduit for the gas, water and electric system passing through the various tiers to the engine room.

An inspection of the shaft disclosed the marks of his hands and feet, while his presence in the engine room is accounted for by Frank Kelly, the engineer, and his helpers, who were surprised by his appearance there about 8 o'clock Sunday night, and equally as surprised by his hasty disappearance through an opening over the iron grating in the engine room.

It was, perhaps, long after Witson had scaled the wall and gained his freedom before the reserves from the Elizabeth Street station were hurriedly drawn up so as to surround the prison by Lieut. McCormick and Sergt. McGuire. The police are certain that no man could have appeared on the wall, much less drop from it and get through the street, while they were there, which was until late in the morning.

The entire force of the Police Department is on the lookout for the fugitive. One of the detectives in the case remarked yesterday afternoon that he was sure of Witson's recapture. All the police were equally confident.

Sheriff Julius Harburger offered his services to the Police Department yesterday, but it was intimated that the department needed no help. Warden Fallon said that he had held a consultation with the Sheriff, but he said that he had not presumed that the services of the Sheriff's men were necessary.

Wilson was arrested July 3 on a charge of breaking into the home of Frederick L. Taylor, a Wall Street broker, at 45 Claremont Avenue, and getting away with jewelry and money, after threatening the broker and his wife with a revolver. He was previously arrested in 1907, charged with robbing the home of James Estus, in West Sixth Street, Coney Island. At that time he was taken by Policeman Farrell, only after he had been crippled by a bullet in the leg.

He went to England following his release, and was arrested in Southampton in October, 1910, when three charges of burglary were placed against him. After serving a term of eighteen months he was deported.

Following his last arrest he was sent to the Tombs by Magistrate Appleton to await the action of the Grand Jury. Witson was not a stranger in the Tombs, for he had been detained there formerly several times. Once he was a trusty, assigned to work in the kitchen. Consequently it is believed that he had become familiar with the various passageways within the prison, and with this knowledge effected his daring escape.

PASTORS OPPOSE REBATES.

Special to The New York Times.

BEVERLY, N. J., July 8.—Aiming to abolish in New Jersey railroad clerical orders which grant reduced passenger rates to ministers, a movement begun by Burlington County pastors is winning the support of many South Jersey clergymen, whose conscience condemns this class passenger rebate as severely as it does freight rebates.

The Rev. William T. Snead, assistant rector of Christ's Protestant Episcopal Church, New Brunswick, but whose home is in Beverly, declared to-day that the matter would be made an issue by progressive clergymen opposed to the use of passes at the next session of the Legislature.

The movement means a State-wide clash between the pass and no-pass factions of clergymen in the different denominations, and the issue already has stirred up considerable feeling. Several prominent clergymen have taken the stand that the rebate granted to clergymen is a species of graft, and the matter promises to figure prominently before the State associations of the various denominations.

BUYS THE CARTERET MINES.

New Process of Ore Treatment Expected to Make Abandoned Property Valuable.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCKAWAY, N. J., July 8.—J. G. Jones, representing a California syndicate that controls a new process for separating sulphur from iron ore by a cheap process, has bought the Green Pond mines near here and will soon begin operations. The mines were abandoned in 1902, when it began to cost too much to get the sulphur out of the ore.

The mines were the property of the Carteret Iron and Steel Company. There is no question as to the abundance of ore yet to be found in the mines. With a method of separating which will not eat up all the profits. The property is said to be a first-class investment.

Fixes Optional Rates on Second-Class Mail Matter.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Publishers will have the option between sending second-class mail matter through the regular mail at 2 cents a pound or by fast freight at 1 cent, if a provision incorporated into a tentative draft of the Post Office Appropriation bill, now before the Senate Post Office committee, is adopted.

The bill probably will provide for an eight-hour day for postal employes with a possible extension to ten, but not to fourteen hours.

1912 Expected to Pass All High Marks for Steel Consumption.

The production of pig iron in the United States has been increasing for several months past, according to The Engineering and Mining Journal, and in May it was at the rate of over 30,000,000 tons a year. Unless some unexpected condition arises, the make for 1912 will be the greatest in the history of the country. This is equivalent to saying that the production of iron and steel for the year will be the largest ever reported. The great consumption of the metals which started up with the reduction of prices and the substitution of an open market for the attempt to maintain controlled prices has continued, and the country is absorbing steel at a rate which promises to continue for some time. The recent advances in price have not been sufficient to check this movement.

The unsold or unused stocks of pig iron, which were so heavy at the close of 1910, were in some degree eliminated in the course of 1911, and have been, during the first five months of the present year, reduced closely to the normal level which it is necessary to carry at all times. The furnaces of Eastern Pennsylvania and of the Mahoning and Shenango Valleys, as well as the Lake district, have been pretty well cleaned out of surplus stocks. Some still remain in Virginia and Alabama, but these are rapidly disappearing and after a month or two may be eliminated entirely from the market.

Central of Georgia Directors Need Money to Improve Road.

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 8.—Directors of the Central of Georgia Railway to-day authorized an $80,000,000 issue of bonds. President Markham of the Central said of the bond issue:

The stockholders authorized the issue of bonds for refunding purposes and for general corporation purposes of the company, intended to cover a long time in the future. Of these bonds, the directors were authorized to make an early sale of such amount as they might deem best, not exceeding $5,000,000 for the immediate purposes for the company, to be used for the improvement and betterment of the property. The mortgage, however, which secures these bonds will cover a total possible issue of $80,000,000.

This provides for the future refunding of all outstanding securities of the company, whenever it shall be practicable to do so, aggregating about $40,000,000 and for all the general corporate purposes of the property, including additions and betterments.

ERB OFF TO FAR WEST.

Inspecting Lines That Are to Form Canada to Gulf Connection.

Newman Erb, President of the Minneapolis & St. Louis and the Ann Arbor, leaves to-day for a trip over those lines, during which he expects to complete the incorporation of a new company which is to be formed to build branches of the former line to the Canadian border. The southern terminal of the new line is to be Watertown, S. D.

Plans were being made for extensions to the Minneapolis & St. Louis on the North and the Iowa Central on the South for the purpose of forming a new Canada to the Gulf line by a connection with the Missouri, Kansas & Texas when the sudden death of Edwin Hawley made it necessary to effect another arrangement for financing the enterprise. It is understood that the financing has been rearranged.

Receiver for Woolen Firm.

BOSTON, July 8.—Walter Shuebruk, of this city was appointed receiver of the Airedale Woolen Company of Pittsfield, by Judge Colt in the U. S. District Court to-day, bonds were fixed at $15,000. The appointment was made on the petition of John A. York, a stockholder who alleged that the assets of the company were threatened by pending suits. The liabilities are estimated at $70,000 and the assets at $200,000.

NEW YORK A DOOMED CITY.

CHICAGO, July 8.—Wilbur Glen Voliva, Overseer at Zion City, speaking last night at Central Zion Tabernacle here, predicted the destruction of Chicago, New York and other large cities and called on his followers to hurry to Zion City, which he said would be the only place spared when the devastation comes.

"God's judgment is going to fall on the cities of the nations," he said. "You must come out of Babylon. There is no choice in the matter; I command you to come to Zion. Chicago will answer for rejecting Dr. Alexander Dowie, and you must be in Zion City to escape."
